WHAT'S ON MY BENCH?

"One thing that I have learned is to have your design technicians do some finishing. Just a couple of cases. It really helps dial them in and makes their designing that much better."

Kris Schermerhorn, CDT from Northern Virginia Dental Lab walks us through the benches in his lab, as well as his favorite products and tried-and-true workflows.

As a full service lab owner Kris doesn't just have one bench that he sits at and works. There are several benches that he uses to ensure his lab is working properly.

- Bench 1—Ordering/pay bills
- Bench 2—Digital work/designing

  "Organizing your cases is important. Card catalogs help get the correct information passed on to the technician. Especially Zirlux Acetal; it's a tricky one because you can do temporaries, bite splints, night guards, and frameworks, so it's important to have that information."
- Bench 3—Finishing

  "One thing that I have learned is to have your design technicians do some finishing. Just a couple cases. It really helps dial them in and makes their designing that much better."

Watch Kris's full video at www.cap-us.com/mybench.