STEVE WOZNIAK has been a Silicon Valley icon and philanthropist for the past three decades and revolutionized the personal computer industry as co-founder of Apple Computer. With its first line of Apple products—Macintosh, Apple I and Apple II—Wozniak and Steve Jobs brought computers to the hands of the mass market. Wozniak's leadership and creativity cultivated significant disruptive technologies such as the iPod (2001), the iPhone (2007) and the iPad (2010), while also helping to build the largest company in the US stock market with a net worth of half a trillion dollars. Wozniak was awarded the National Medal of Technology, the highest honor bestowed on America's leading innovators, by the President of the United States.
