Wine and Chocolate to the Rescue

Three San Francisco hotels offer a “Save Me, San Francisco” package (from $239; personalityhotels.com) that supports local products and benefits Family House (familyhouseinc.org), a nonprofit guest house in San Francisco that provides temporary housing to families of children who are patients at the University of California San Francisco’s Benioff Children’s Hospital. The name of the package comes from the band Train’s hit 2009 album; it’s also the name of the band’s wine company (savemesanfranciscowineco.com) and a limited-edition chocolate bar line by Ghirardelli (available at the same website). Proceeds from wine and chocolate sales also benefit Family House. The package—$10 of which benefits Family House—includes accommodations at San Francisco’s Hotel Diva (hoteldiva.com), Kensington Park (kensingtonparkhotel.com), or Hotel Union Square (hotelunionsquare.com) and includes a bottle of Save Me, San Francisco Soul Sister 2011 pinot noir, two Ghirardelli Save Me, San Francisco chocolate bars, and late checkout. ♦
