EQUATION FOURTH EDITION

The 24:7 Dad® curriculum will require each man to really examine himself, his relationship with his children and the relationship with the mother of his children. If every man who enters this program is open to change, I have no doubt in my mind he will change and for the better.

~Sterling Alexander, Vice-President, M.E.N.

If I had to rate this program [24:7 Dad®], one word: 'priceless.' It's absolutely priceless. I would say that every father, potential father and anyone thinking about being a father should be a part of this program.

~Howard Tayari, 24:7 Dad® participant

WHAT'S NEW IN 24:7 DAD® A.M. AND P.M.

YOU ASKED, WE ANSWERED! 24:7 Dad[®] was updated based on feedback from facilitators like you.

Separate Facilitator's Manuals for group-based and one-on-one delivery!

Facilitators can select a manual customized for working with groups of dads or with one dad at a time—or both! This takes the guess work out of customizing the program for delivery during home visits, as part of one-on-one case management, and in other settings that require or are ideal for serving dads individually.

Session scripts!

Facilitator requests and NFI staff's observation of program facilitation argued for restructuring program content to make it even easier to deliver. Session Guides now contain scripts for delivering content concisely, quickly, and powerfully! Scripts make it easier for seasoned facilitators to take their delivery to another level. They also make it easier for new facilitators to learn the program more quickly so they can hit the ground running.

New videos and engaging content!

Gone are outdated animated videos. In are inspiring videos of real dads, children, and families! These professionally-crafted videos engage dads and enhance their learning. Shown during the Welcome and Warm-Up activity, the videos cover what dads will learn motivating them at the start of every session. They also make the program easier and more fun to facilitate! NFI also added videos describing the program's incredible impact on building the five characteristics of a 24:7 Dad, as told by program graduates!

Improved flow of activities!

NFI staff identified gaps in the flow of some program activities, such as procedures that lacked clarity or suffered from omissions. We closed those gaps with clearer or additional content, some of which reflect facilitators' tips integrated into activities as vital content rather than treating them as "thoughts to consider." These improvements include those in the My 24:7 Dad® Checklist and Closing, Comments, and Evaluation activities that close out sessions.

Sources for evidence-based and evidence-informed content!

Facilitators asked for even more sources supporting the program's content, so now the Session Guides integrate more data sources. We also added new tips and guidance on communication, healthy relationships, and more.

Improved Fathering Handbook!

We added content reflecting new tips and guidance. We also redesigned it to eliminate clutter and make better use of space.

New PowerPoint® slide decks!

Facilitator requests and NFI staff observations of program delivery—especially virtually—led to the addition of a slide deck for each version. They reinforce some of the most critical program content while including just enough to engage dads visually but not distract them from engaging with each other or the facilitator.

Improved Fathering Surveys!

Based on feedback from facilitators, we revised questions for clarity in the evaluation tool for each version.

Additional design improvements!

We reduced clutter in the Session Guides and formatted the content to easily pick out the new scripts. Gone is the tiny flash drive with supporting resources—such as handouts for some sessions and program fidelity tools—that was so easy to misplace. In is a dedicated webpage containing those supporting resources updated for use with the new edition. And we added new resources, such as a guide on using the program with teen dads. Continue to access the resources there or download them to your hard drive or a shared drive.

LEARNING COMPETENCY:

The Dad demonstrates capacity to identify three of his personal traits he likes.

PROCEDURES:

- 1. SAY: Welcome to Session 4 of the 24:7 Dad® P.M. program. Today's session focuses on understanding yourself better and how to build self-worth in your children. But first, would you like to share your experience trying some of the actions you put in your My 24:7 Dad Checklist? For example, perhaps you revised or eliminated an action or added another action.
- 2. (Give the Dad an opportunity to share.)
- 3. (Optional: Have the Dad recite the 24:7 Dad[®] Pledge.)
- 4. (Turn to the flip chart paper you prepared for this activity.) SAY: Please complete the following statements in your Fathering Handbook on page 18.

ASK: Can anyone share the meaning of these terms and if they're related in any way?

Self-Esteem

Self-Worth

(Allow time for his response. Don't record it.)

(Optional: Project the slide.) SAY: Here are simple ways to separate the meanings of these terms and how they're related. You can follow along in your Fathering Handbook on page 18.

SESSION 4 | Knowing Myself

SESSION 4 KNOWNG MYSELF

Welcome and Warm-Up

Three of my traits that stick out in my mind are:

The trait of mine I like the most is

Building Self-Worth

Self-concept is what you think of yourself.

Your self-concept is what you think about yourself. Your self-concept can be positive or negative thoughts about parts of your life. You might have a good self-concept as a gardener, but a bad self-concept as a cook. Selfconcept varies as widely as your roles and responsibilities.

Self-esteem is what you feel about yourself.

Your self-esteem is how you feel about yourself. It means whether you hold yourself in high esteem or low esteem overall. How others see and what they say to you greatly affects your self-esteem.

Self-worth is what you think overall about yourself.

Your self-worth combines the overall thoughts (self-concept) and feelings (self-esteem) you have about yourself.

Six tips to build self-worth

Positive Reminders. On small sticky/postit note, write the trait or behavior you would like to develop. Place the note somewhere you will see it every day, such as the fridge. When you do something that reflects the trait or you practice the behavior, draw a star on your note

POINT

Self-worth combines the overall thoughts (self-concept) and feelings (self-esteem) you have about yourself.

Your self-concept can be positive or negative about different parts of your life. You might have a good self-concept of yourself as a gardener, but a bad selfconcept of yourself as a cook. Self-concept varies as widely as your roles and responsibilities.

- Self-esteem is what you feel about yourself. It means whether you hold yourself in high esteem or low esteem overall. How others see you and what they say to you greatly affects your self-esteem.
- Self-worth combines is the overall thoughts (self-concept) and feelings (selfesteem) you have about yourself.
- 3. SAY: Getting in touch with the bad and good messages we send ourselves is the first step in building self-worth.

The messages come from how we see ourselves. How we see ourselves comes from things that have happened to us as far back as childhood.

ASK: What is a bad message you have about yourself?

(Allow time for his response. Write it on the flip chart.)

SAY: The mind forms habits in thinking. These are called "habit thoughts." One way to break a habit thought is to think an opposite thought. Every time a bad message runs in your head, immediately substitute it with a good one.

- (Review the bad message the Dad shared and have him create and share a good message about himself. Provide an example if necessary, such as the ones below:
 - I won't succeed. Bad
 - Good I will succeed.
 - She won't like me. I'm not good enough. Bad
 - Even if she doesn't like me, I'm a good man and I value and like myself.) Good
- (Optional: Project the slide.) SAY: Here are six tips to build self-worth in yourself and in family members. The first tip involves Positive Reminders. Follow along in your Fathering Handbook on pages 18 and 19. (Consider having the Dad read the tips aloud instead.)

On a small sticky/post-it note, write the trait or behavior you'd like to develop. Write the word "respect," for example, if you'd like to have respect between you and your wife/mother of your children. Place the note somewhere you'll see it every day, such as on the fridge. It's best to work on one trait or behavior at a time.

When you do something that reflects the trait or you practice the behavior, draw a star on your note as a reward and write the date as a reminder. Do this as many times as you spot the trait or practice the behavior.

Use this same idea for traits and behaviors you want for other family members. Every time you see the trait or behavior, praise the person or the behavior. For example, tell your son or daughter "I appreciate your kind heart" or "Thanks for picking up your clothes." Don't forget to draw a star and date on the note every time you see the trait or behavior.

I gave you a pad(s) of sticky/post-it notes to take home and apply this tip.

6. SAY: The second tip involves Praise for Being and Praise for Doing. Can you share what Praise for Being and Praise for Doing are or give an example of each if you can't define them?

(Depending on the response, confirm or say that Praise for Being is when you praise someone simply for being who they are.)

SAY: The praise isn't tied to a specific action. Praise for Doing, on the other hand, is tied to a specific action.

(Offer an example of both types of praise or get examples from the Dad.)

SAY:

- Give Praise for Being to family members every day.
- Give Praise for Doing to family members every day.
- Make it a habit to accept praise given to you. A "thank you" is the polite way to receive and value such a gift.
- 7. SAY: The third tip involves Self-Praise.

Make it a habit to give yourself Praise for Being, like "I'm a worthwhile person" and "I'm a caring man", and Praise for Doing, like "I'm doing a good job of listening to others" and "I did a nice job cooking dinner" every day. Giving self-praise can seem a bit weird, so you must pay special attention to following this tip.

8. SAY: The fourth tip builds self-worth through Touch.

Nurturing touch is a wonderful way to build self-worth in children and in yourself. Children love to be held and hugged, have their backs rubbed, their hands held, and sit on their parents' laps. And most parents, including fathers, like their children to give hugs and kisses to them. So, give and get hugs and kisses regularly! If you have a child who is about to become a teenager or who is one already, remember that older children need nurturing touch just as much as they did when they were younger. Fathers sometimes stop giving their sons hugs and kisses when their sons get older because "it's not manly" and their daughters because the fathers become uncomfortable with their daughters' physical changes.

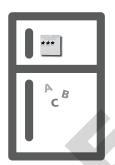

Touch also helps your children with proper brain and immune system development.²² Gentle touch on a regular basis helps children form a gentler, patient brain. Touch that hurts, on the other hand, creates an angry, impatient brain.

ASK: What are some ways you can get nurturing touch?

(Allow time for his response.)

SAY: It can seem a bit weird for guys to talk about this subject, and that's okay. Touch is a need every human being has and that doesn't change as you grow older. Some examples of nurturing touch include a massage, a back tickle from your wife or partner, and even a pat on the back from a friend after a job well done.

(Consider adding examples from sports, such as pats on the bottom, chest bumps, etc.)

- 9. SAY: The fifth tip involves finding your and your children's Sweet Spot. A good way to build self-worth is to know what you're good at and do more of it. If a father is good at wood working, he'll have a good self-concept as a woodworker. The more he does wood working, the more he builds his self-esteem. He should do wood working as often as he can. Find your Sweet Spot and your children's. If you and any of your children have the same Sweet Spot, such as you're both good at landscaping yards, aim to landscape together often.
- 10. SAY: The sixth tip for building self-worth is to Help Others, especially family members. A simple way is lending an ear and valuing what another person has to say or believes even when you don't agree with what they said or have the same belief.
- 11. ASK: Which of the six tips do you want to work on first?

(Allow time for his response. Don't record it. Encourage the Dad to underline or circle a tip he wants to work on in his handbook.)

ASK: Do yoy have other ideas on building self-worth?

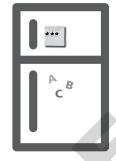

(Allow time for his response and encourage him to write the ideas in his handbook and try them.)

ACTIVITY 4.3 Self-Worth Survey MATERIALS: Fathering Handbook

FACILITATOR'S GOAL:

To increase the Dad's self-awareness of his and family members' self-worth by completing the "Self-Worth Survey."

LEARNING COMPETENCIES:

- 1. The Dad increases awareness and knowledge about his and family members' self-
- 2. The Dad increases capacity to identify his and family members' self-worth by completing the survey.

PROCEDURES:

1. SAY: Now that you understand the concept of self-worth and its importance, we'll focus in this activity on how the 24:7 Dad builds self-worth in himself and others, especially family members. In a moment, you'll take a survey that will help you determine how well you build self-worth.

Please locate the "Self-Worth Survey" in your Fathering Handbook on page 20. Use it to identify the people who built your self-worth when you were a boy, and who do so today as well, and whether you build self-worth in others. Put a check mark or "x" mark next to all the answers that apply. You have five to ten minutes to complete it.

2. (After the Dad finishes, ask him to answer the following questions based on his answers to the survey. Ask the questions one at a time allowing the Dad to answer before asking the next question. These questions also appear in the Fathering Handbook on page 21.)

ASK:

- Did you have at least one good model of how to build self-worth growing up?
- Do you have at least one good model today of how to build self-worth?
- Do you build your children's self-worth in at least one way?
- Do you build your own self-worth in at least one way?

(Explore any responses that stand out.)

3. ASK: Would you like to share anything else you learned from this survey?

(Process the response with the Dad. Comment on his response with the following questions in mind: Did he have someone who built his self-worth as a boy? What about today? Does he build self-worth in others?)

4. ASK:

- Is there anything you'd like to do differently to build self-worth in yourself?
- Is there anything you'd like to do differently to build self-worth in others?

(Allow time for his response. Encourage him to write down the ideas in his Fathering Handbook and try them.)

ACTIVITY 4.4 My

My 24:7 Dad[®] Checklist Items

MATERIALS:

My 24:7 Dad[®] Checklist Worksheet located before the What I Learned Log in this session of the Fathering

Handbook

FACILITATOR'S GOAL:

To help the Dad use what he learned during today's session to identify action items he'll consider including in his final My 24:7 Dad* Checklist.

LEARNING COMPETENCIES:

The Dad demonstrates the capacity to identify action items that, given his unique situation, will help him develop the habits of an involved, responsible, committed father.

PROCEDURES:

1. (Facilitator Tip: Stress the importance of identifying actions that are simple to perform. Tell the Dad that there are four elements to consider in determining whether an action is simple: time, money, effort [physical and mental], and how easy it is to repeat the action. The Dad should identify actions he has the time to complete, can afford, doesn't take a lot of effort, and can repeat often.

The influence of these elements will differ depending on each father's unique situation [e.g., custodial, residential, marital, and financial status].)

- 2. SAY: Use what you learned during today's session and identify up to three actions you can take to develop the habits of an involved, responsible, committed father—a 24:7 Dad. Here are things to keep in mind:
 - Identify actions you can take on a daily, weekly, monthly, or one-time basis that will have the most impact on your ability to be involved in your children's lives. When you write down an item, check whether you'll do it daily, weekly, monthly, or only one time. It's okay if you can't identify three items. The most important thing is that the items will have the most impact.
 - Focus primarily on daily and weekly actions. The more frequently you take actions, the easier you'll find it to be a 24:7 Dad.
 - Identify actions that are realistic, given your unique situation, and as easy to do as possible. Set yourself up for success not failure.
 - Finally, identify actions that are clear, specific, and—except for those that will only occur one time—repeatable.

- Use the "When" and "If" formats for your actions. They help create clear, specific actions that include a trigger or reminder to take the action.
- Consider actions you already do that connect you to your children.
- Remember that you're working on the items you might include on your final checklist at the end of the program. Don't be concerned about listing an action you might not include in your final checklist. It's fine to include anything you want to try because you'll have a chance during Session 12 to refine list, such as removing actions.

(Have the Dad share his items. Coach the Dad if he didn't correctly use the "When" and "If" formats.)

3. SAY: Before the next session, you can add or eliminate actions based on thoughts you might have during the week on actions you should take.

(Reminder) Card

FACILITATOR'S GOAL:

To bring the session to a close by helping the Dad process what he learned, evaluating whether he acquired the learning competencies of the session, and allowing him to comment on and end the session.

LEARNING COMPETENCY:

The Dad demonstrates the capacity to complete the What I Learned Log entries for Session 4 located in the Fathering Handbook.

- 2. (Ask the Dad to share what he learned and give you his rating on how likely he'll be to use it. If the Dad gives you a rating of 3 or lower, ask him why. His response can give you insight into barriers that will prevent him from using what he learned. Consider helping the Dad address the barrier as you close the session.)
- 3. SAY: To help us know whether you learned the most important information in today's session, please answer the questions in your Fathering Handbook (and that appear on this slide). This isn't a test. No pressure. I'll give you a minute to think about the correct answers. Then I'll ask you for your answers.

(Facilitator Tip: An alternative approach is to read the questions and answers aloud. If you do, read them exactly as written. Say the answer choices slowly and twice. This approach will be more effective with fathers who have literacy challenges.)

SESSION 4	ŀ
KNOUII	117	M45	F! F

Welcome and Warm-Up

Three of my traits that stick out in my mind are:
, and
The trait of mine I like the most is

Building Self-Worth

Self-concept is what you think of yourself.

Your self-concept is what you think about yourself. Your self-concept can be positive or negative thoughts about parts of your life. You might have a good self-concept as a gardener, but a bad self-concept as a cook. Selfconcept varies as widely as your roles and responsibilities.

Self-esteem is what you feel about yourself.

Your self-esteem is how you feel about yourself. It means whether you hold yourself in high esteem or low esteem overall. How others see and what they say to you greatly affects your self-esteem.

Self-worth is what you think overall about yourself.

Your self-worth combines the overall thoughts (self-concept) and feelings (self-esteem) you have about yourself.

Six tips to build self-worth

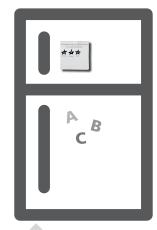

Positive Reminders. On small sticky/postit note, write the trait or behavior you would like to develop. Place the note somewhere you will see it every day, such as the fridge. When you do something that reflects the trait or you practice the behavior, draw a star on your note as a reward and write the date as a reminder. Use this same idea for traits and behaviors you want for other family members. Every time you see the trait or behavior, praise the person or the behavior.

Praise for Being and Praise for Doing. Praise for Being is when you praise someone simply for being who they are. The praise isn't tied to a specific action. Praise for Doing, on the other hand, is tied to a specific action. Give "Praise for Being" to family members every day. Give "Praise for Doing" to family members every day. Make it a habit to accept praise given to you. A "thank you" is the polite way to receive and value such a gift.

Self-Praise. Make it a habit to give yourself Praise for Being and Praise for Doing every day.

Touch. Nurturing touch is a wonderful way to build self-worth. Give and get hugs and kisses on a regular basis. Older children need nurturing touch just as much as they did when they were younger. Touch also helps children with proper brain and immune system development.

Sweet Spot. Know what you're good at and do more of it. Find your Sweet Spot and nurture the same in your children.

Help Others. Lend an ear and value what another person says or believes, even if it's different from your beliefs.
