

7 Things You Didn't Know About Sage Pay's Merchant Services

In order to be able to accept payments online, you need to set up a Merchant Account.

A Merchant Account fulfills a different function to a main business account and you need to have both working together to process payments.

Essentially, it allows you to accept card payments through different channels, whether online or off.

It's your Merchant Account that holds funds until they are cleared and ready to be transferred into your main bank account.

Sage Pay have partnered with Merchant services provider Elavon to be able to offer Merchant Accounts and we can secure competitive processing rates for your business.

1 No contract

With Sage Pay and Elavon Merchant services, we won't tie you in to a contract.

2 Increase conversions

Provide your customers with the choice to pay in the way they want by accepting all major credit and debit cards. 53% of businesses agree that a range of payment types drive loyalty.

3 No set up fee

When you're setting up your business, cashflow is key and you need to keep outgoing costs to a minimum. That's why we won't charge you a set up fee.

4 No monthly fee and no minimum spend

With no monthly fee or minimum spend, you can manage your payments easily, with no additional costs.

5 Expand your business overseas

47% of the UK's businesses do not currently operate overseas and you don't need to physically open stores abroad to get ahead of the competition. Take advantage of a global customer-base by accepting payments in multiple currencies.

6 No authorisation or refund charges

Unlike some merchant service providers, we won't charge you an additional fee on top of our rates for authorising payments or processing refunds. All you pay for is your settled transactions.

7 Get dedicated support

Just like setting up a normal bank account, you'll need to complete some paperwork and our team will guide you through process and help you keep on top of your application.
