

Ellevation Education Named a Finalist for the 2013 Ed Tech Award by The Mass Technology Leadership Council

City, MA – Last night, Ellevation was named a finalist for Massachusetts Technology Leadership Council's 2013 Ed Tech Award, before a crowd of more than 200 tech executives at the Microsoft NERD Center in Cambridge, Mass.

In its 16th year, The Massachusetts Technology Leadership Awards celebrates innovation and leadership in technology. The awards winners in this category and 16 others will be announced at the annual Awards Gala on Thursday, September 12 at the Westin, Waterfront.

"We are thrilled to be recognized and proud to be a part of the both the growing Boston ed-tech community as well as the tremendous Boston innovation sector," said Jordan Meranus, Co-founder and CEO of Ellevation. "We are excited about our work and the impact we are having on schools, educators, and students across the country and this recognition is a great honor for our team the vision we are trying to achieve."

"We are honored to have Ellevation as a finalist for the 2013 [Category] Award," said Tom Hopcroft, President and CEO of MassTLC. "Ellevation's technology and market leadership is testimony to what fuels Massachusetts' vibrant tech community."

About Ellevation
