Addison Auto Receives Denver Pollution Prevention Partners Certification

Denver, CO (PRWEB) December 28, 2009 – Addison Auto Repair & Body Shop is one of only three auto shops recently to receive the Denver P2 Partners certification from the Denver Department of Environmental Health. Denver P2 Partners is a voluntary and non-regulatory program that provides free educational outreach and technical assistance. The primary goals of the program are to increase participation and adoption of sustainable practices to minimize use of hazardous materials, improve energy efficiency and water conservation, and decrease the use of resources and generation of waste.

Denver Pollution Prevention Partners provides free, non-regulatory, and confidential technical assistance and advocacy on environmental matters to the private sector business community. The program employs a variety of outreach and assistance strategies to businesses to address pollution prevention alternatives and environmental best management practices aimed at reducing regulatory burden, understanding of environmental regulations, and minimizing environmental risk and liability. The program also provides assistance with coordination and referrals to interested businesses to “green” their operations to become more energy efficient, conserve natural resources, reduce greenhouse gas emissions and limit overall emissions to air, land and water.

First and foremost the program assists businesses with regulatory compliance in a non-threatening manner. The auto repair certification for environmental achievement aims to assist businesses with reductions in waste generation, safer chemical management practices, and efficient use of materials, water and energy. Less waste means lower disposal and operating costs.

Brenda Addison said, “The two things that are different about this program are the helpful nature of the program administrators and their assistance with information and resources. The certification program not only requires compliance with environmental regulations but more significantly encourages businesses to continually improve their environmental practices. Through our involvement with the program, Go Green Electric, Inc is currently monitoring our energy consumption and Groundwork Denver conducted an energy audit to make suggestions on better controlling our energy usage. After our involvement with this program, we’re considering sustainability and conservation when making decisions.”
