First up...

Who I am, What I do

Erik Devaney

Content Strategist

What I do: I create content offers (e.g. ebooks, guides, checklists, videos, infographics, templates, etc.) that our email, blogging, and social teams use to generate and nurture leads.

How I Planned for it

- 1 Scheduled a “kick-off” meeting to determine which budget templates would be most beneficial to include in the offer
- 2 Set up meetings with internal experts from different disciplines
- 3 Blocked off time to put the offer together / get feedback / make edits
- 4 Coordinated with various stakeholders to make sure all assets were delivered on time for promotion

How I Executed

- 1 Came up with a working title for the offer and created an outline
- 2 Brainstormed line items for each budget template
- 3 Built out all of the templates in Excel and optimized for usability by adding instructions and call-outs
- 4 Finalized working title, created promotional assets/landing page copy/blog post, sent deliverables to everyone involved in promotion

How I Engaged with the Team

- 1 Worked out the email promotion date with Niti, which helped me establish a production timeline. Once the offer was complete, I sent her all of assets she needed to create the email(s).
- 2 Once the email promotion date was set, I pitched a few ideas for a promotional blog post to Corey. She gave me feedback and we set a date for the post.
- 3 I made sure Brittany had all of the assets/context necessary to promote the offer via social.

Who I am, What I do

Niti Shah

Head of Email Marketing

What I do: Generate leads through email marketing and turn new leads into customers through lead nurturing.

My Part of the Campaign

- 1 Reach out to influencers in our contacts database and encourage them to promote the budget templates
- 2 Incentivize evangelists to share the templates with their colleagues
- 3 Create and send a segmented email campaign to align the templates with different personas to encourage downloads and lead gen

How I Planned for it

- 1 Identify “influencers” in our contacts database to reach out to
- 2 Identify segments by role and interest that were a good fit for offer
- 3 Strategize positioning of offer for evangelists of HubSpot

How I Executed

- 1 Created a list of influencers based on their Twitter follower count
- 2 Created segmented lists for promotion based on role and interest
- 3 Created + sent email to influencers a week before launch asking for feedback + survey response
- 4 Created + sent “preview” email to Evangelists morning of launch to encourage sharing and lead gen
- 5 Created + sent offer to segmented contacts database, tailoring content to each persona

How I Engaged with the Team

- 1 I set a promotion date and relayed it back to Erik. The offers team then worked around that as the deadline. I also consulted him to go over positioning and intended audience for offer.
- 2 The set promotion date then affected the date the initial blog post would be launched.
- 3 The set promotion date affected the main social media push. Brittany also worked on copy for LinkedIn influencers that I used as a guide for the email to influencers.

Who I am, What I do

Corey Eridon

Senior Blog Editor

What I do: I figure out what kind of content we need to publish to grow the blog as a lead-gen channel – and then go find that content, get it up, and try to do it in a scalable way.

My Part of the Campaign

- 1 Figure out how to use the blog to generate awareness around the Budget Templates
- 2 Figure out how to generate lots of blog leads from the Budget Templates Offer
- 3 Identify any other solutions the Budget Templates Offer helps solve (Lead Generation, LTCC, Product Awareness, Sales Enablement)

How I Planned for it

- 1 Keyword Research: Phrases like “marketing budget template”, “budget template”, and “how to manage marketing budget” had high search volume (around 8,000/mo) with low competition
- 2 Audited for Existing Related Content Assets: Only results were indirectly related to budgeting through the lens of Marketing ROI
- 3 Identify the offer as primarily helpful for lead generation – over LTCC, Product Awareness – and secondary for Sales Enablement.

How I Executed

- 1 Coordinate with offer author to understand contents of templates.
- 2 Identify best working title for SEO, Sales, and Launch Impact: “How to Manage Your Marketing Budget [Free Templates]”
- 3 Identify additional working titles for follow-up posts to support lead gen and offer success
- 4 Agree on author, outline, and submission due date, post publish date.
- 5 Edit post for maximum lead gen impact.

Who I am, What I do

Brittany Leaning

Social Media Manager

What I do: I manage all of HubSpot's social media channels to grow our reach, generate leads, and delight our customers.

My Part of the Campaign

- 1 My goal = attracting strangers through social media and turning them into visitors
- 2 I do this by sharing the Budget Templates blog post and landing page and optimize for both shares (RTs) and clicks

How I Planned for it

- 1 Communicate with the team – What’s the ultimate goal for this offer? When should this be promoted? What time does promotion start? For how long should we promote this offer?
- 2 Forecasting where the Budget Templates will be most successful and least successful
- 3 Come up with a schedule – promoting more heavily on the more successful networks for this topic, and less heavily (if at all) for the least successful networks for this topic

How I Executed

- 1 Creating or repurposing images for social
- 2 Scheduling for various networks/times/days for the entire month
- 3 LinkedIn group announcement with engaging budget-planning discussion
- 4 Measuring click numbers and optimizing for future posts

How I Engaged with the Team

- 1 Erik created the offer. If the Budget Templates didn't exist, I would have nothing to promote!
- 2 Corey wrote the blog post about the offer. Once the post goes up, I use images, text, and other information from this post in my social promotion. I drive traffic to the blog post from social media so more people have a chance to see the step-by-step instructions with CTAs for the offer throughout the post.
- 3 Niti announced the offer to our email list. I coordinate with Niti to make sure we don't overlap on copy/messaging ... since I have a list of my own when I send our LinkedIn group announcements!
