

Workplace Safety Leader, Arbill, Launches New Safety Magazine

Philadelphia, PA – The leader in workplace safety, Arbill, is proud to announce the inaugural issue of Safer Every Day, the definitive digital magazine on workplace safety. This complimentary digital publication gives safety executives the insider information they need to stay informed on all things related to job safety. Safer Every Day will be released quarterly to more than 35,000 safety decision makers throughout the United States and will serve as a valuable resource to help safety leaders create a culture of safety within their organizations.

Every issue will include key insights from industry experts, product reviews and updates on the latest trends plus news from OSHA. A comprehensive calendar of all upcoming safety-related events featuring date, location, cost and focus of the event will also be provided.

Each issue will feature timely and useful, feature length articles on safety-related issues that are of key interest to safety professionals. The focus of the first issue is heat stress, which has become a growing problem as temperatures continue to rise due to the effects of global warming. In fact, the past 11 months have been the hottest months in 135 years of documentation and according to the National Weather Service; heat is the leading cause of weather fatalities over the last 10 years. Educating employees, adhering to the heat index and following OSHA guidelines are just a few of the steps employers can take to help combat the effects of heat stress.

Subscribers will also get key insights on workers' compensation issues from leading workers' comp attorney Matthew Wynn and updates on legislation from National Association of Manufacturers' Director of Labor and Employment Policy, Amanda Wood. Arbill's Michael Amen offers his expert perspective on EHS-related issues and specific content for those in the military and government who
