

Julie Copeland Named to NAM Board of Directors

Philadelphia, PA – Arbill, a privately-held and award-winning safety solutions company headquartered in Philadelphia, PA announced that CEO Julie Copeland has been named to the National Association of Manufacturers (NAM) Board of Directors.

The NAM Board is comprised of more than 200 of the nation's top manufacturing executives, representing large and small companies across all industrial sectors. Board members provide national and global perspectives on the issues that matter most to the NAM membership and direct policy that supports the creation of jobs and ensures domestic manufacturers remain competitive in the global economy.

Arbill CEO Julie Copeland

“I am thrilled to be elected to the Board of Directors for the National Association of Manufacturers,” shared Julie Copeland. “I very much look forward to working with my fellow Board Members to support manufacturers of all sizes in the United States. I am humbled at the opportunity to bring Arbill’s focus and expertise on workplace safety to the NAM board and contribute to the growth and prosperity of NAM members across the country,” Copeland concluded.

Copeland has driven Arbill’s strategic and expansive growth since taking her current role in 2005. She expanded Arbill’s business to a national footprint, developed Arbill’s own safety product line - TruLine®, and has transformed Arbill into a full service safety solutions company. Through its safety products and EH&S consulting, training and support services, Arbill is at the forefront of protecting the lives of workers across the country.

In addition to being named to the NAM Board, Copeland was selected as one of the Top 100 Innovative Leaders by Real Leaders Magazine (inspiring better leaders for a better world). She is also a Board Member of Women’s Business Enterprise National Council (WBENC).
