It starts with a great text ...

... a great question ...

... and one great mind.

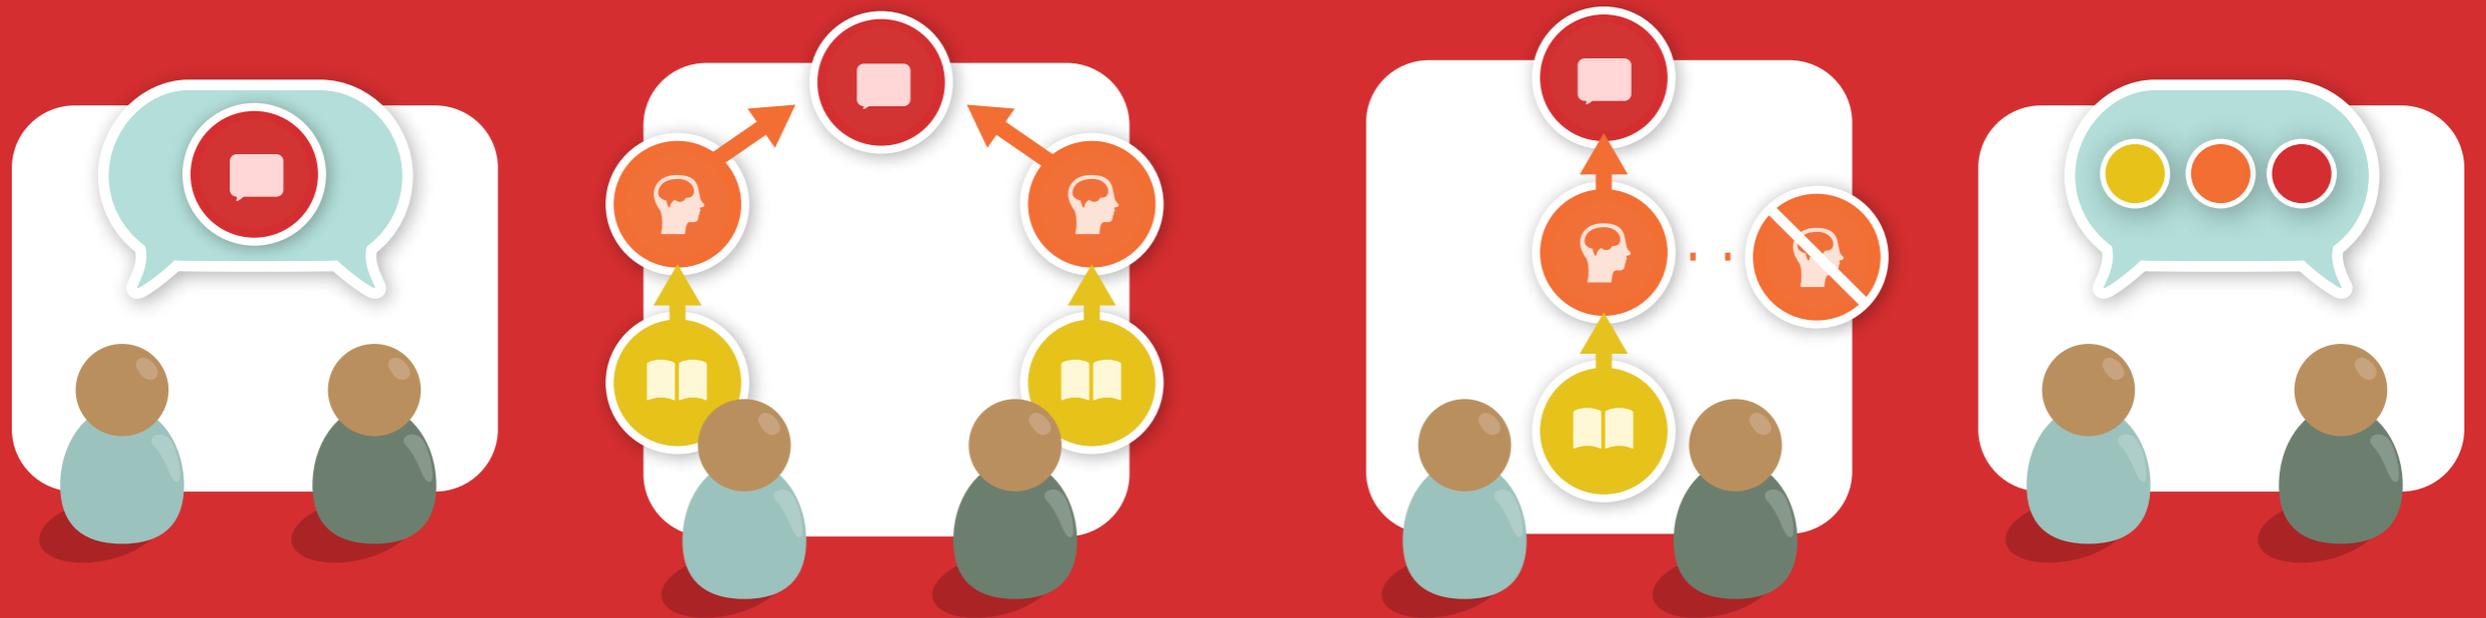

It is important to think for yourself.

It is helpful to think with others, too.

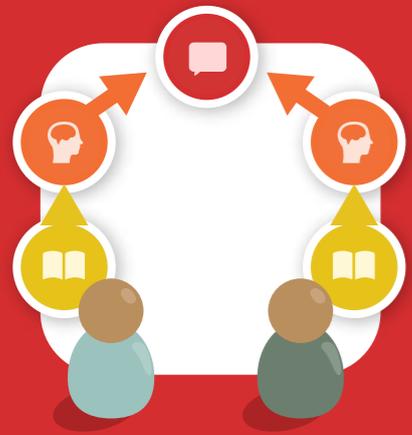

Here's how to communicate and share with others in four easy steps.

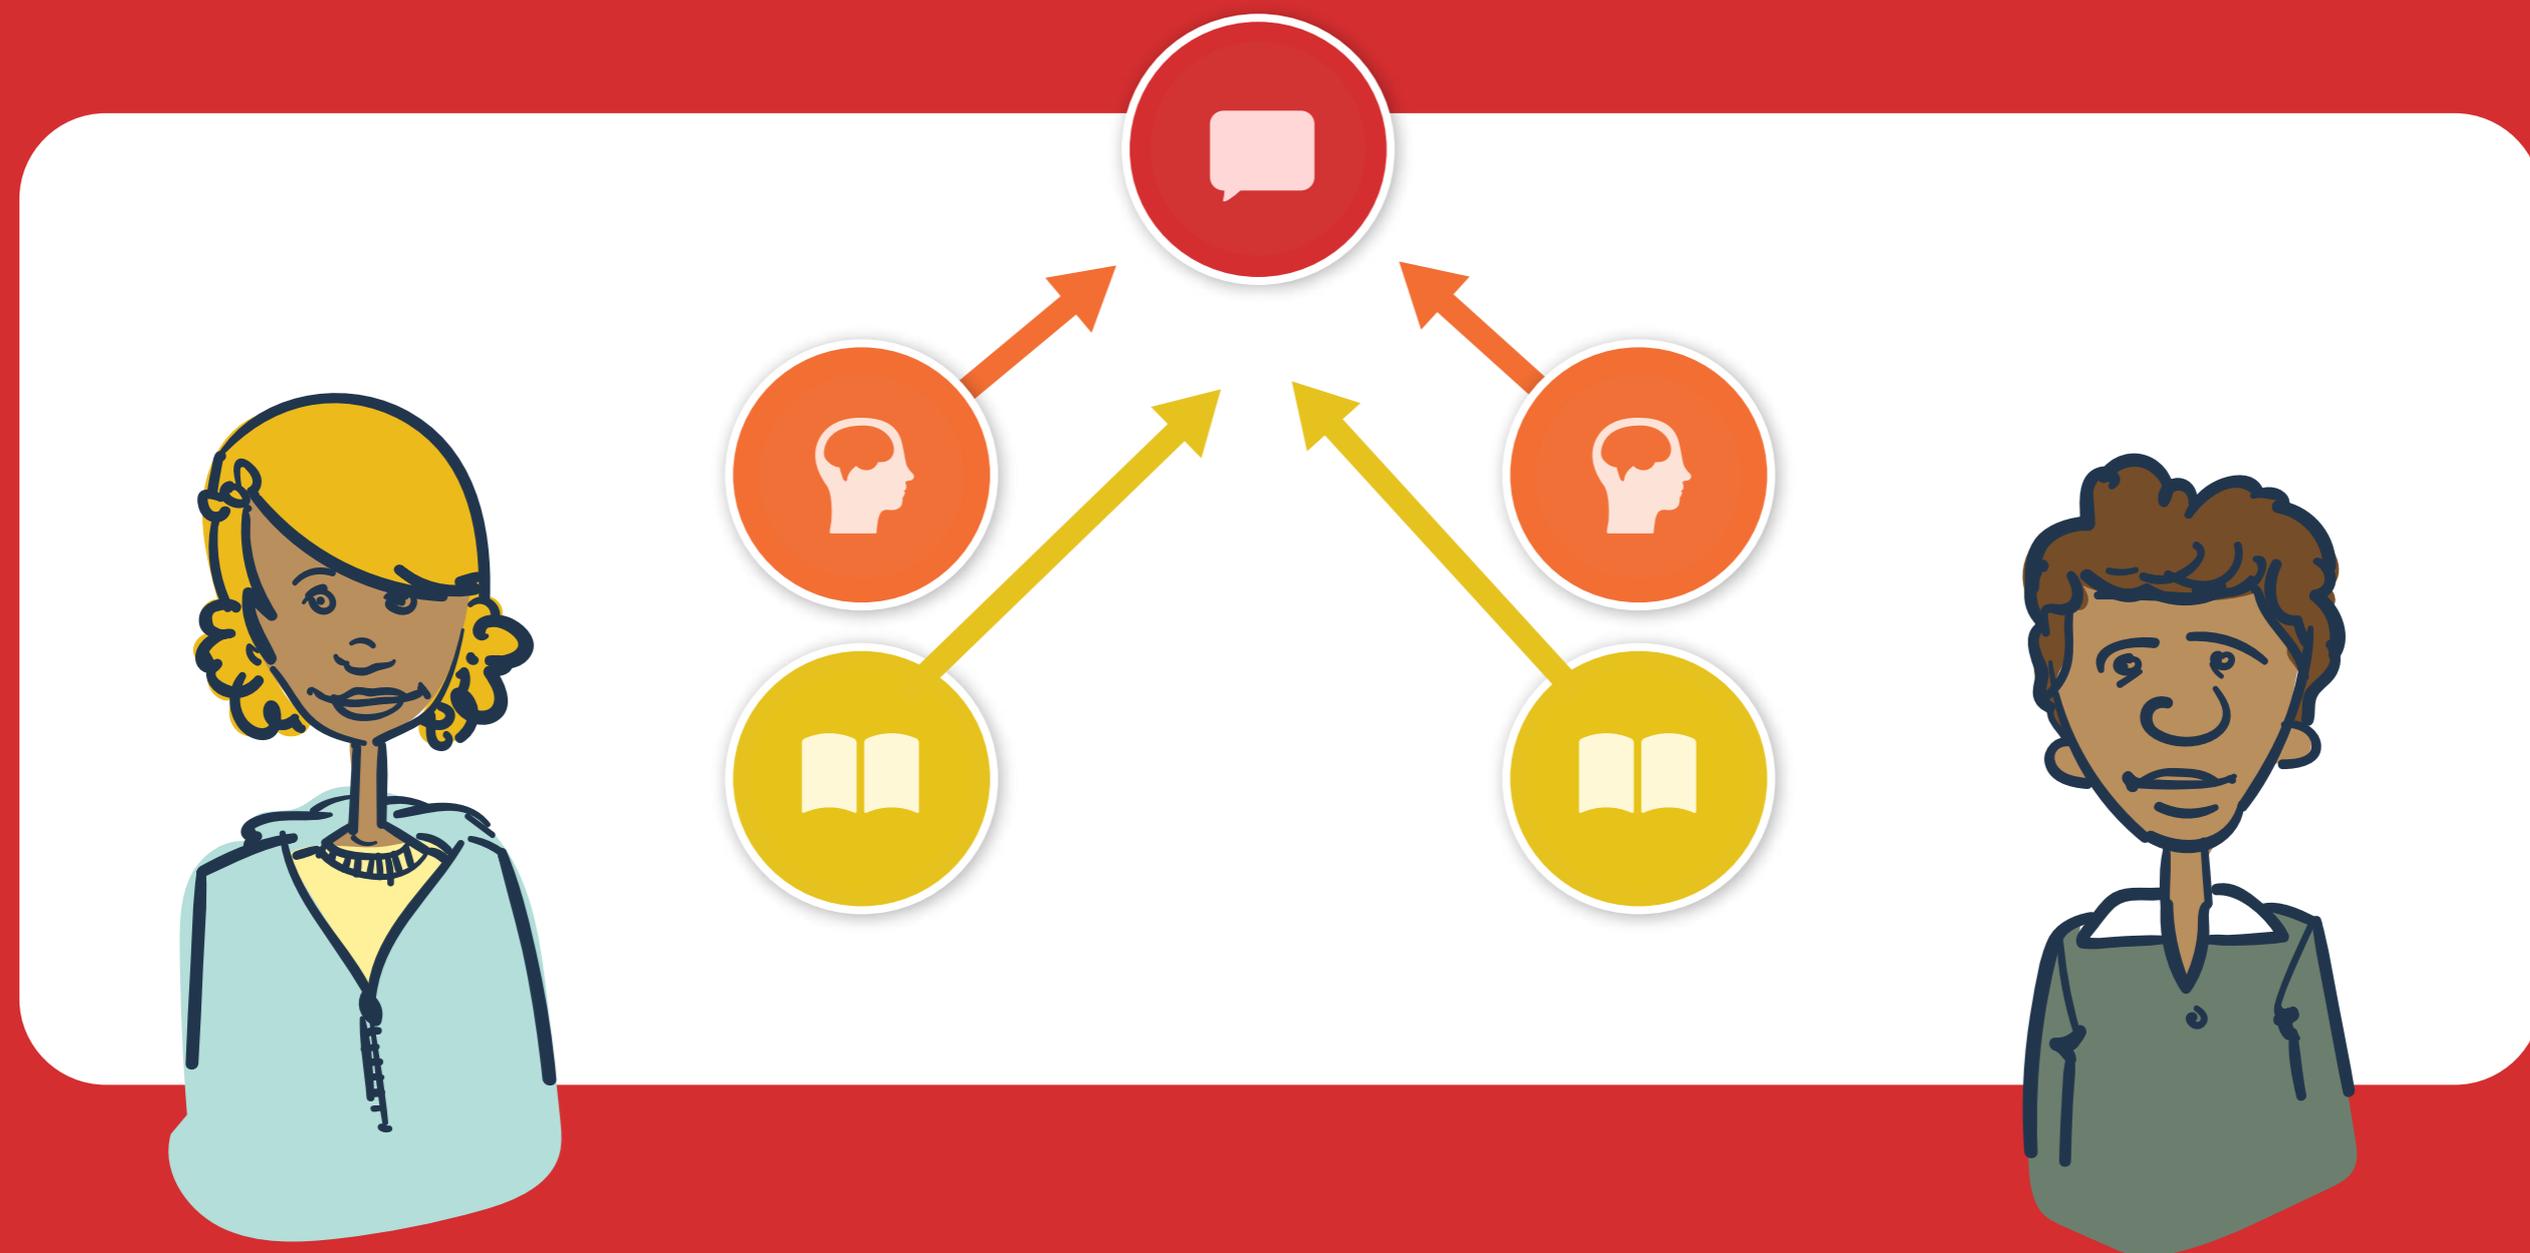

After you have completed reading, develop a claim with your partner.

2

Separately, find one reason and one piece of evidence to support that claim.

3

Together, eliminate duplicates and refine your reasoning.

4

Discuss: Explain how you link your evidence back to your reason and claim.

What is your reasoning?

Citing Evidence

According to the author _____.

In other words _____.

Engaging with Peers

Sentence Frames

I disagree with _____.

_____ was wise to point out _____.
To add to it, I would argue _____.

Engaging with Peers

Sentence Frames

_____, I heard you say _____.
Am I getting that right?

_____, is it fair to summarize your point by saying _____?
