ACCESS TO DEGREES

Degrees are still incredibly valuable - by the time a graduate is 30, their average salary is £31,041, compared with just £17,899 for employees whose highest qualification is a GCSE.

PRE-DEGREE ACCESS DIPLOMA

1 year, 2 days per week (apply to College)

Awarding body: CAVA

If you'd like to study for a degree but have little recent experience in education, an Access to Higher Education Diploma is a good place to start. It enables you to get back into the learning groove, and is specifically designed to accommodate adults who have decided to return to learning.

An Access Diploma is a well-established qualification that demonstrates your abilities as a learner, and your potential to achieve success on a degree programme. It will enable you to be accepted for entry at any UK university or Higher Education college.

During your Access Diploma, you will gain study skills, subject knowledge and confidence to progress to a Foundation or Honours degree programme either here at Somerset College or at another academic institution. We will support you every step of the way as you rediscover your passion for education.

Each year, more than 85% of our successful Access Diploma students progress to the next stage of Higher Education. Some have gone on to the world's leading institutions, including the University of Cambridge, the European School of Osteopathy, the University of St Andrews and the University of Exeter.

Your Access Diploma will cover key areas such as study skills and IT, alongside a range of optional subject specific modules. This is augmented by an in-depth tutorial programme that provides a supportive and encouraging learning environment, giving you every chance to flourish. If you don't already possess them, it may be possible to study for GCSEs in Maths, English and Science (Human Biology and Health).

Because we know that your life is busy, our Access programmes are designed to fit around childcare responsibilities and part-time working. That means you can continue living your life to the full, while completing a one-year course that will open up a whole new world of possibility for your future career.

The Access Diploma is accredited by the CAVA examination board. It features continuous assessment by means of course work exercises and some written in-class tests. Once you achieve your Access Diploma in a relevant discipline, we will guarantee you a place on one of our own university programmes (subject to interview, in some cases).

Entry requirements

These vary per pathway and will be discussed at your interview, but motivation and a commitment to completing the course are essential to success. You must be aged 19 or older to apply.

Note

If you are between 19 and 23 when you start the programme and this is your first qualification at this level, you will not be charged course fees.

GRAHAM LILLEY
Lecturer and Curriculum Area Manager
Pre-degree Access Diploma

I'm responsible for the delivery of many qualifications. I develop the curriculum for the future in order that it fits the diverse needs of students and the industries that recruit them.

I've been working in the education sector for 17 years. Prior to coming to education I worked for ten years in various laboratories in technical, supervisory and management roles, in industries ranging from polymers to food raw materials storage and processing.

I wanted to work in education to pass on my industry knowledge and to apply learning in a vocational context. I really enjoy seeing students achieve their full potential in the College's supportive environment.

The Pre-degree Access Diploma is designed to prepare students for university. It is very satisfying to help them successfully gain the entry requirements for their chosen degree, and achieve their ambitions.

SABRINA CLINGHAM
Pre-degree Access Diploma

This course is designed to help improve your A Level results with a view to getting a university place. This is certainly true for me since I'm now at the University of Winchester studying theology, archaeology and history. My intention is to complete a PhD in Archaeology and travel around Britain.

I chose Somerset College for the Access Diploma because it was convenient to my home and has a really friendly atmosphere. We were treated as adults in order to prepare us for university but were still able to have fun.

The course is a perfect blend of English and history, which merge really well, and requires you to form your own opinions. There was a wide age range within the group, which made our debates very interesting and the lecturers ensured everyone was heard. They are very knowledgeable and I can't speak highly enough about the support we received.

"I really enjoy seeing students achieve their full potential in the College's supportive environment."

CAROLE BEACH

Lecturer and Curriculum Area Manager
Business Studies

I've been teaching for over 20 years and update my industry knowledge through regular industry placements. Prior to teaching, I worked in sales and marketing within the travel industry.

The degrees reflect both industry and current trends. Modules investigate the growth in communication channels such as social media, economic and political changes to the external environment, and globalisation.

Most business programmes follow similar modules, but ours stands out because we have links with professional bodies such as The Chartered Institute of Marketing (CIM) and Association of Accounting Technicians (AAT). They offer accreditation towards their own qualifications or access to their organisation.

All students carry out a significant work placement and we have an Internship Officer who helps find internships during years two and three.

I find teaching very rewarding and stimulating since no two days are the same. It's very exciting when students achieve their goals, exceed their own expectations or secure the ideal work placement.

EMILY CORBETT

BA (Hons) Business Administration : top-up

Initially I thought about studying at Plymouth University, but realised I could complete this degree at Somerset College, save money and be closer to home. I have lectures two days a week so have kept my part-time job in retail, but as the degree has become more demanding, I've had to cut my work hours.

I didn't know anyone before starting and I've made a lot of friends. The course is excellent and really interesting, giving me an in-depth insight into the business world. The lecturers are very supportive and make themselves very available. The class sizes are small and the College has great facilities. There's a library just for degree students and a lovely restaurant run by catering students.

As I currently work for Waitrose, I had planned to work my way up within the company, but now I'm not sure. I'm interested in event management so looking into graduate schemes and thinking about what to do when I finish.

I would definitely advise others to study, but they should know that an Honours degree is far more difficult than a Foundation Degree and expect to have to work hard. Don't let that put you off. It's very rewarding and you get a lot of individual support at Somerset College.

"Our degrees reflect both industry and current trends."

Almost 1,000 graduates in employment are working as marketing associate professionals.¹

STAFF & ALUMNI

KATHY HILL

Lecturer

Business Studies

I have 20 years experience in business, spending a number of years working for a national retailer in HR before moving into recruitment and selection. After that, I worked in training and development running management development programmes for an international consultancy firm.

It's very important to be aware of global and local issues as business is affected by so many factors. Business is fast-moving so it's very important to keep up-to-date - without that contextual knowledge, it's very difficult to study. My specialist field is Human Resource Management and I keep abreast of HR trends by being a paid-up CIPD member.

The business team make contact with various local businesses, organise visits and invite guest speakers. One of the modules in the second year is covered by a consultancy project in conjunction with a local company. They set the aims of the project and the students meet those objectives as though they are real-life consultants.

The College's business courses are well established and have a strong teaching team supporting them. We're all very approachable and spend far more time with students than I had access to when at a uni. I enjoy watching students develop. Teaching is all-consuming and I love it.

ADAM FRANCIS

Certificate in Strategic Leadership
& Management

Business Development Manager

I have a business studies degree with coaching, but started to think about gaining a post-graduate qualification in order to enhance my career prospects. This course is a stepping stone to gaining a Masters qualification, but also recognised by employers in its own right.

Somerset College offers flexible study options including workshops and self-directed study, condensed into four months. The qualification has increased my understanding of the theories and models within modern-day leadership and management practice.

I found the unit covering managing change within organisations particularly interesting and useful, since businesses are always in flux. The tutor support throughout the course was exemplary, providing reliable advice and guidance. Questions were swiftly answered and reassurance readily provided, allowing me to study in the knowledge that I was meeting the assessment criteria.

“The tutor support throughout the course was exemplary, providing reliable advice and guidance.”

AS points will be subsumed into A2 points for the same subject. New qualifications are regularly being added to the tariff and the aim is to include as wide a range of achievements used for entry to higher education as possible.
