For Manufacturing Professionals

Companies in the manufacturing industry face unique safety concerns for their employees. While OSHA standards guide employers to implement safety controls, Argent focuses on the losses driving your workers' compensation exposure and premiums. The professionals at Argent help you develop and customize processes tailored to your specific business needs to help employees avoid injury. When an accident does occur, Argent actively manages your employee's medical care to produce the best outcome for the injury and return that employee to work as soon as possible.

Our team of loss control consultants is uniquely qualified to assess manufacturing environments from safety and ergonomic viewpoints. Comprised of occupational and physical therapists, certified industrial hygienists, emergency medical technicians, and certified ergonomists, our team's knowledge and understanding of biomechanics and mechanism-of-injury uniquely qualify them to identify potential injury risks before they occur. Using our innovative and customer-focused techniques, our loss control consultants work with you to bridge the gap between hazard identification and the implementation of real-world, practical solutions to mitigate those risks.

When an accident does occur, our experienced claims adjusters and nurse case managers efficiently guide employees to effective treatment protocols to get them the right care at the right time. Every Argent client has a dedicated medical-only adjuster, indemnity adjuster, and nurse case manager with the goal of managing each claim to produce the best possible outcome for the employee and the company.

When you choose to work with Argent, you've taken the first step in reducing workplace injuries, improving employee productivity, saving valuable resources, and taking control of your insurance costs – short and long term.
