2013 PRC Excellence in Healthcare Conference.

A Recap.

The 14th annual PRC Excellence in Healthcare Conference was June 2-4, 2013 at the Hyatt Regency Grand Cypress in Orlando, FL. More than 200 professionals, including hospital CEOs, healthcare executives, physicians, nurses and department managers, were in attendance. The conference included two full days of educational sessions, networking, great food and fun.

Dr. Inguanzo's Welcome

Dr. Joe Inguanzo, PRC's President and CEO, welcomed the group to this year's conference by speaking about a few of the new innovations and enhanced tools available to PRC clients on PRCEasyView.com[®]. Since meeting just one year ago, our Research & Development staff has worked tirelessly to improve the ways our clients use and interact with their data and will continue to find the best ways to present, utilize and interpret results.

More specifically, Dr. Inguanzo unveiled current work being done on our CG-CAHPS application. When rolled out for public consumption, users will find a more visually appealing interface that encourages staff's understanding of and progress toward their goals. In addition, sorting and using Patient Comments through PRC's VoicesSM application is now easier than ever before, and improved action planning tools are on the horizon for our clients so they might encourage accountability and more efficiently track action plans across their organizations.

The Importance of Engagement

Dr. Inguanzo's overriding message, however, related to the importance of engagement in all aspects of the healthcare experience. "Engagement is an area into which we have put a lot of effort in the past three to four years," said Dr. Inguanzo. Along with PRC researchers Cynthia King, Ph.D, and Daniel King, M.S., PRC has been studying the effects of physician and employee satisfaction and the relationship to workplace engagement. Explained Dr. Inguanzo, "An eight-item instrument has been added to our medical staff and employee surveys. Through these added variables and the use of high level mathematics, PRC has identified very strong correlations between physicians who express 'excellent' responses for their hospitals as a Place to Practice Medicine, and among employees who rate their organizations as 'excellent' Places to Work.

"The implications of this correlation are important because it helps identify a better way to increase engagement among physicians and employees; rather than attempting to 'get into their heads' and create emotional change, we can simply work to make the organization a better place operationally. In improving the workplace environment in ways that are important to your physicians and employees, engagement will also increase. Engaged physicians and employees create more positive patient experiences. It all goes together," said Dr. Inguanzo.

From Ritz-Carlton to Healthcare

Attendees were delighted by the addition of Paul Westbrook to this year's welcoming keynote address. Westbrook shared "Hospitality to Healthcare Service Delivery through 'Puttin' on the Ritz!'" Westbrook is passionate about personal experience. So passionate, in fact, that in 2012 he came out of retirement from a 27-year career with Ritz-Carlton to lead and transform the patient experience at Inova Health System.

Westbrook shared the details of a three-year overhaul of the way Inova interacts with patients, which targets 300 distinct touch-points that shape customers' perspectives on service. At Inova, he is leading a revolution to overcome an evidence-based culture of transactional healthcare to a culture of focusing on each individual patient's needs and returning caregivers to their roots. •

Gunlock Welcomes Top Performers with One Word: Excellence

Teira Gunlock, awards dinner emcee, is a Client Education Consultant who works for PRC from Los Angeles, CA.

The following excerpt is from Teira Gunlock's opening comments at the 2013 Excellence in Healthcare Awards Dinner. Promising to keep her remarks brief, Gunlock expressed one word to sum up the reason for the gathering – Excellence. That one singular phrase brought a round of applause from those in attendance, especially those waiting to receive one of the highest honors of their careers and recognition for their hard-earned efforts to improve the patient experience.

"PRC is proud to be a part of this healthcare community. And we are thrilled to recognize the top healthcare organizations in the country for providing an extraordinary environment for employees to work, physicians to practice and patients to receive care.

We work in an industry that matters. I'm sad to say that people in other industries don't necessarily feel that way about their work. A lot of people have jobs that bore them, which they don't feel motivated to do for any reason beyond just paying the rent. And maybe sometimes, we feel that way, too.

But our work is important and it helps people. For those of you who are top performers, one of the main reasons that I believe you have achieved such success, is that you understand the impact of your work.

The Japanese have a word for this. It's called 'ikigai.' It translates to 'the reason you wake up in the morning.' Or 'the reason you continue to breathe in and out.' It turns out, that when individuals have a sense of purpose - when they have ikigai - they actually live longer, fuller lives.

It turns out that not all of the jobs that have to be done in our hospitals and in our facilities are the most interesting jobs in the world. They don't all pay six figures and they don't make you famous. But they matter.

That is something that helps us push through the days we don't want to be there or the times when it's stressful...when we'd rather just be sitting in a dark room somewhere. Knowing that what we do provides comfort to families, heals patients and improves lives is what gets us through the rough patches.

One of the reasons that many of you are winning awards tonight is that you've been so successful in getting EVERYONE to realize that what they do is significant and that their contributions mean something beyond a paycheck.

As nice as it is to be recognized for your hard work and achievements, and as much as everyone loves a good trophy, what's going to keep you going isn't this beautiful hardware; it's the understanding and appreciation that you are here for a reason. You play an essential role. And you are doing great work." •

2013 Excellence in Healthcare Awards Dinner

Top Performers Honored

The Excellence in Healthcare Awards Dinner celebrated and recognized 14 top performing organizations for their efforts in providing excellent services to their patients. In addition, Amy Jacquemard from Children's Hospital Colorado, Aurora, CO, was honored as PRC's 2013 Leading Light Award winner.

Crystal Top Performer awards are given annually to eligible healthcare facilities that score the highest percent "Excellent" on the overall measures. Organizations were recognized as being Top Performers in Patient, Medical Staff and Employee Loyalty measurement.

Awards Criteria

Earning top billing in PRC's nationwide Patient, Medical Staff and Employee databases is no small achievement. Every year, hundreds of organizations work diligently to provide their patients with the highest level of quality care and to make their hospitals the best places for physicians to practice medicine and for employees to work.

Along with continually monitoring scores, developing action plans and working in teams to improve the overall patient experience, PRC clients understand that it is excellence that drives scores. This concentrated focus on providing "wow" experiences is one of the many things that set PRC clients apart from all the rest.

Top Performer Award

The crystal Overall Top Performer award is given annually to each healthcare facility, healthcare provider, outpatient service line and inpatient unit that ranks the highest among all other organizations within PRC's national database. PRC's highest honor is awarded to the top scoring eligible facility based on the percentage of "Excellent" responses for the prior year.

5-Star Award

This designation is awarded annually to healthcare facilities, providers, outpatient service lines and inpatient units that score in the top 10 percent (i.e., at or above the 90th percentile) of PRC's national database. The award is based on the percentage of "Excellent" responses for the prior year. In addition to receiving a plaque to display in their facility, 5-Star Award winners are listed alphabetically in the PRCEasyView.com® Best Practices resource section, which allows them to serve as a resource for other hospitals and receive year-long recognition.

4-Star Award

The 4-Star Award is given annually to healthcare facilities, providers, outpatient service lines and inpatient units that score in the top 25 percent (i.e., between the 75th and 89th percentiles) of PRC's national database. This award is based on the percentage of "Excellent" responses for the prior calendar year. Award winners receive a certificate to display in their facility. •

Employee Engagement

Measured as a Place to Work

Mount Pleasant Hospital

Mount Pleasant, SC

PRC's National Employee Database was comprised of hundreds of healthcare facilities, but only one received the distinct honor of being at the top. Mount Pleasant Hospital in Mount Pleasant, SC, had more than two-thirds of its employees rate their institution as an "excellent" place to work. The 85-bed hospital is part of Roper St. Francis Healthcare and emphasizes comfort, communication and care with a personal touch.

Bonnie Jones (Carolinas HealthCare) accepts on behalf of Roper St. Francis-Mount Pleasant Hospital.

Paul Westbrook and Dr. Pradeep Nayak accept for Inova Fair Oaks Hospital.

Patient Experience

Each year, PRC talks to more than one million patients about their hospital experiences. Providing great service to patients can be difficult and takes a lot of hard work, which is why winning a Top Performer award is so special.

Children's Hospital of Los Angeles Los Angeles, CA

Category: Pediatric Inpatient Care

Children's Hospital of Los Angeles was tied for Top Performer status in inpatient care among all children's hospitals in PRC's database. Mark Stock, Manager of Customer Experience at CHLA, said that 2012 was a year when a number of initiatives really came together and were aligned, including staff training and development, implementation and traction of a "shared governance model," nurses' preparation and training related to Magnet re-designation, and ongoing quality work.

Medical Staff

Measured as a Place to Practice Medicine and Overall Quality of Care

Inova Fair Oaks Hospital Fair Oaks, VA

Physicians are an important part of the care that is delivered and their enthusiasm and partnership is vital to growth. PRC takes great time and care to interview physicians all around the country. Inova Fair Oaks Hospital was honored as a top performer on the two overall medical staff measures – Place to Practice and Quality of Care.

As part of the Inova Health System, this 182-bed hospital serves Northern Virginia. When asked about key initiatives that contributed to success, Dr. Michael Lynch, the hospital's CMO, said, "First and foremost, we've worked hard to develop a safety culture where the entire medical staff has a relentless pursuit of safety and reducing errors." They hold daily safety huddles and about nine months ago, they developed the "Great Catch" program to encourage staff to submit items that nearly reached a patient, but staff recognized the possible error or risk in the situation. In addition to safety, Dr. Lynch said that physicians are not just customers, but partners and they work together in strategic planning.

The leaders had to continue to inspire the team and keep team members accountable to the expectations set from the start. “The bottom line of this team is that it isn’t about them; it isn’t about egos; it isn’t about titles. They all know how important their role is and their PATIENTS are their focus,” she said.

In addition, they are internationally recognized for improving child health and transforming delivery of care through fully integrated, globally recognized research, education and innovation. This is the second, consecutive win for this organization in this category.

Char Mason accepts the award for Children’s Hospital Medical Center for the second time in two years.

More than 200 professionals, including hospital CEOs, healthcare executives, physicians, nurses and department managers, met June 2-4 in Orlando, FL, for the 14th annual PRC Excellence in Healthcare Conference at the Hyatt Regency Grand Cypress.

Leading

For seven years, PRC has presented a superior hospital employee with the Leading Light Award. This award was created to pay tribute to exemplary work in overseeing the PRC education process and consistent monitoring of the patient perception survey results. The winner of this award is one who makes a positive impact on his or her organization, develops strategies to educate staff on the PRC philosophy and is effectively improving scores.

The 2013 honoree, Amy Jacquemard, hails from Children's Hospital Colorado.

When hearing that Amy would be recognized for this award, Suzy Jaeger, CNO at Children's, exclaimed, "We could not be more proud of our Amy. She has been 'leading the light' of our service excellence and patient family experience efforts at Children's for the past several years. We are thrilled to know she will be receiving this award."

Teira Gunlock and John Gnida, PRC Client Education Consultants, visited Children's Hospital Colorado last year as part of their "bright spots" research. Both were immediately impressed with Amy's dedication to include off-site facilities in all of the service excellence training efforts. In addition, she is always leading the organization to focus on the positive and increase the "wows", and not simply focus on reducing the problems when it comes to the patient experience. •

June 4, 2013

Dear Friends,

It is a remarkable privilege to be selected as the 2013 PRC President's Award winner and to be recognized for our extraordinary progress in improving the quality and experience of healthcare services for physicians. On behalf of our many dedicated physicians, nurses and staff in the HCA Central and West Texas Division, I want to thank you for this special honor. We greatly value the recognition of our commitment to excellence, and we sincerely wish we could be there with you this evening to celebrate this notable achievement.

The HCA Central and West Test Division is comprised of eight acute care hospitals and related services that are part of Central Texas-based St. David's HealthCare and El Paso-based Las Palmas Del Sol Healthcare. We have extraordinary physicians associated with all of our facilities, and we proactively collaborate with and value our physicians as vital partners in providing our patients with exceptional care. From physician satisfaction teams who take results from our PRC annual survey and derive actions to improve our organization based on the physician's perspective — to our dedicated teams of professionals who visit with physicians, listen to their input and follow up on any issue that may arise — we believe that the relationship with our physicians is key to our success, and understanding their perspective is vital to improving everything we do. We have very specific strategic initiatives that drive execution of systematic processes all directed at ensuring that the physicians who care for our patients know how much we value the contributions they make toward exceptional outcomes and an outstanding patient experience. It is our intent that all of our relationships with physicians be built on a foundation of collaboration, mutual trust and clinical excellence. Ultimately, these things lead to the highest level of care for our patients, and that's what matters most.

I want to thank our physicians and the members of our hospital leadership teams for their commitment to making superior patient care and service their number one priority, and I want to thank our talented and compassionate employees who are truly dedicated to caring for the needs of those we serve. Our shared pursuit of excellence and passion for service help us make a positive impact in our community and in the lives of our patients and their families.

Our vision is to be the finest care and service organization in the world, and every day we take purposeful steps in that direction and work to make that vision a reality. It's a high bar, but it's what our patients expect, and it's what they deserve. This award symbolizes for us recognition of our unwavering commitment to our mission of providing exceptional care to every patient every day, and we sincerely appreciate and thank PRC for this incredible honor.

Sincerely,
C. David Huffstutler
President

ACHIEVEMENT AWARDS

Unlike other PRC National Excellence in Healthcare Patient Awards, the PRC Achievement Awards are based on entries submitted by current clients. This award recognizes organizations at the hospital, facility, department or unit level that have enhanced their patients' perceptions of care by focusing on their Key Drivers of Excellence*. All qualifying Achievement Award entries are based on initiatives implemented during the 2012 calendar year.

Each entry is assessed by three judges who consider innovation and originality, impact on patients' perceptions and impact on staff or work environment (among other criteria). PRC presents Silver, Gold and Platinum awards based on the compiled score of all three judges. In addition to receiving a plaque in recognition of their achievement, winning organizations' achievements are shared in the Ideas at Work section on PRCEasyView.com*. •
