WOOD SPECIES

General Woodcraft offers over forty natural wood species in stock and many more are available on a custom order basis. Choose from the warmth and subtlety of an Ash or Maple or the vibrant tones of exotics such as Bloodwood or Purpleheart or create a striking grain effect with Zebrawood or Rosewood.

Even more choices are available when these species are used together in your overall design.

Here teak and holly are combined in a plank style for a dramatic linear effect while cherry and walnut are shown in a pattern using an end grain construction for a rich bold accent.

CONSTRUCTION STYLE

Flat Grain (plank style)

This style shows off the boards' natural face graining and is a great choice for desk tops, table tops and other non-food prep areas. Species that have a lot of natural grain character show exceptionally well in this style (Hickory, Ash, Oak, Cherry, Exotics, etc.).

Zebrawood {Flat Grain}

Edge Grain

This style is achieved by laying the boards on edge before assembly. Creates an extremely hard surface and reveals more grain character of the wood species than the flat grain style. A winning selection for nearly every species available.

Lyptus {Edge Grain}

End Grain (butcher block)

Although this style is labor and material intensive, the results can be breathtakingly beautiful. Wood species can be used alone or in combination with others to create stunning contrasts and visual drama. Creates a great focal point wherever it is used.

Cherry with Jatoba Inlay and Edgewood {End Grain}
