

Is your team ready for the desert?

Teams huddle in a flimsy canvas tent, hurriedly pitched in the harsh Australian desert. They urgently discuss resources, storms and different routes. Outside the wind howls, camels roar and glory awaits! Decisions made in this high pressure environment will have far reaching consequences for the success of the mission ahead.

What is at stake? Survival? No, far more than that! Every team knows there can be only one winner and they each want to be the one.

How will they win? They must negotiate the desert, mine more gold than any other team and return safely to base camp. In their path lie storms, scorpions and helicopters – and fierce competition from other teams.

Lasseter's Reef, A Quest for Gold™ is inspired by the legendary Australian story of Harold Lasseter, his passion for gold and a lifelong quest to relocate the treasure he stumbled upon in the early 1900's. The location of Lasseter's reef, once predicted to trigger Australia's next great gold rush, remains a mystery.

Learning from Lasseter's Reef

Lasseter's Reef™ is a dynamic learning event, combining a highly engaging activity with a powerful debrief that ensures participants learn from their experience.

As in real life, teams must do specific things to achieve exceptional results. The debrief helps participants translate 'lessons from the desert' into concrete understandings and actions to improve team performance. These include planning, managing limited resources, evaluating alternative strategies, working well as a team, setting clear objectives, dealing with pressure, optimising available information & time and creating a winning team mindset.

Applications

Lasseter's can be used as a stand-alone training or conference activity or as part of an ongoing leadership, team or sales development program. It is very versatile, can be run for almost any group and does not require any physical activity.
