WASHINGTON, D.C. (Sept. 15, 2013) – AmeriFirst Home Mortgage President and co-founder Mark A. Jones recently traveled to Washington, D.C. to meet with Carol Galante, Commissioner of the Federal Housing Administration (FHA). Jones (fourth from the right in the blue tie) joined several other community mortgage bankers for the Annual Legislative Conference of the Community Home Lenders Association (CHLA).

Jones and the CHLA took the plight of the home buyer to Galante, discussing the need to keep FHA loans affordable and available to qualified borrowers. “FHA loans are a vital tool for home buyers today,” Jones said. “With the lower down payment requirement and flexible terms, first time home buyers and other qualified borrowers often utilize FHA loans. The housing market would suffer a major setback without the FHA.”

Jones is available for comment on the state of the current housing market and what’s ahead for home buyers.
