

Why You Need Leasing Software

If leasing is important to your business, then your lease portfolio should be too. Lease management software is available and although you may not have considered it a priority, there are several reasons you should consider getting some.

Reduce Processing Time and Storage

Store all your leases securely on cloud-based leasing software, saving you physical space and time spent on internal processing and archiving.

Increase Savings and Reduce Costs

Having your leases consolidated allows you to clearly see and act on money saving opportunities from extended agreements and unwanted assets.

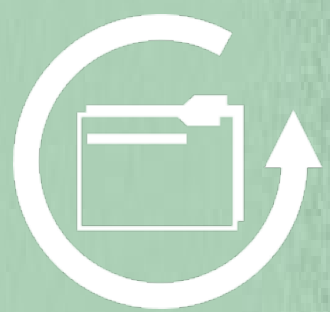

Ensure 100% IFRS Compliance

An organised portfolio is much easier to review, making accurate reporting much easier, especially with the pending new lease accounting standard.

Full Audit Trail

With a centralised system for lease management, you are able to see a full audit for the entire leasing process - from inception right through to termination.

Secure Cloud-Based Storage

Be assured that important lease schedules and documentation are backed up on a secure server. Control accessibility by setting tailored user levels to match your internal structures.

Tailored Reporting

Analyse your leases efficiently with tailored graphs and reports. Easily track savings, number of assets, upcoming notice dates and more to keep on top of your portfolio.

Arrange Notifications

Set alerts and reminders for end of lease notice dates and other contractual obligations to make sure you never breach the terms of use.

Negotiate Better Deals

By having full control of your lease portfolio, you can see potential money saving opportunities and what features work best for your company's procurement needs.

So Why Not Upload Your Leases?

Leasing and leasing software go hand-in-hand so if your business relies on leased assets, why not make the most of all these great features?
