

I Look Just Like My.....

Lindsay: Good evening.

Keriann: Hi.

Francis: Hi Lindsay.

Lindsay: Hey. So let's start with Keriann. Keriann, how are you like your family of origin? (Like) how are you like your parents in terms of appearance?

Keriann: Well, in terms -- I look just like my dad. I'm kinda (kind of) like his twin. My mom always says, "You are definitely your father's daughter." But definitely in, in more ways than just that we look alike. (Um), he -- we have a lot of the same hobbies. He always -- he taught me how to do (like) everything growing up and (um) definitely have the same work ethic and independent spirit and that kind of thing. (Um), yeah we talk alike. We have a lot of the same mannerisms. I don't really know specifics off the top of my head, but I've definitely been told that many times.

Lindsay: That's really interesting. It's so funny to (kind of) see -- I guess it's funny for your father to see himself in you and vice versa.

Keriann: Yeah.

Lindsay: How 'bout (about) you Francis? How are you like your family of origin?

Francis: Well, I'm definitely like my father. (Um) he passed away many years ago, but (um) when I was growing up we had a picture when he was two and when I was two and we looked, (you know), exactly the same, so (um) and then in reference to just the way he was, he was very caring and also a very social kind of guy and I find that about myself as well. (Um), so (um), and I find I'm more – actually I find that I'm more like my mom as I'm getting older, which kind of scares me a little bit. (Um), hope you're not listening. No. So (um), but it's true (like), as you grow older, you kind of emulate your, your parents.

Keriann: I think I'm very much nothing like my mother. (Um) and that also is a conscious effort on my part. That's so bad of me to say. But (um), I don't know, she just likes to do a lot of different things and we really don't have much in common. (Um) so (mm), it happens. It happens. (I mean) whatever happens, happens. Sometimes we take on personality traits or appearances of our parents and that is the way it is.

Lindsay: Interesting. Okay. Thanks guys.

Francis: Thank you.
