

Your Habits Drive Me Nuts!

A: So are you going to sign the lease on this apartment for another year?

B: Yeah, I think so. Are you?

A: I don't know. To be honest, I don't know if I can live with you anymore. Your habits drive me nuts.

B: What habits? What are you talking about?

A: Well first of all, you leave the water dripping in the sink and shower every morning when you go to work and I have to run around the house turning off the faucets.

B: Oh oops sorry. Well I can be better about that.

A: Well that's not all.

B: Really? What else do I do?

A: You eat scoops of peanut butter and leave the spoon in the sink without washing it. It's pretty disgusting.

B: Well I'm sorry, but it's not like you don't have any bad habits.

A: Oh yeah? Like what?

B: You don't clean the bathroom. I am always the one who cleans it.

A: Well I am pretty busy you know. I just took a new position at work and I am working 60 hours a week these days.

B: And you don't pay your bills on time. That is the worst. Last month I had to cover your portion of the rent.

A: Well I guess we both have some bad habits. I will try to get better at some of this stuff.

B: Yeah, I will too.
