Tom Williams is the Business Continuity/Disaster Recovery Strategy Manager for Centurion Disaster Recovery®, a division of Jack Henry & Associates, Inc.® (JHA). Tom joined Centurion in 2000 to establish a business continuity consulting practice, a project which consisted of building and training the consulting staff, developing a business continuity planning methodology, and producing the associated customer deliverables. Once the practice was established, the consulting team began to deliver business continuity planning (BCP) services to financial institutions throughout the country. Tom and his consulting team are also responsible for developing JHA's corporate BCP program.

Prior to joining Centurion, Tom worked with IBM for 23 years as a consultant with their Business Recovery Consulting Group. He is a member of the National Speakers Association and is sought out on a regular basis to speak on various topics related to business continuity and disaster recovery, motivational topics, and leadership. Tom is also on the faculty of The Graduate School of Banking at the University of Wisconsin where he teaches on the subject of business continuity planning and disaster recovery strategies.

Tom's presentations are not only educational, but they are also very motivational, thought-provoking, interactive, and inspirational. He has a B.S.B.A. from Wayne State University in Detroit, MI; and a masters degree in Management from Walsh College in Troy, MI.
