

VETERANS: Through the Eyes of a Child

Do you know who Veterans are? Veterans are very special people who deserve lots of respect. They may be people we know or do not know. Even though they do not look like Superman, Spiderman, or even Batman, they are our American heroes who defend and protect our country every day. We should honor Veterans because of their bravery and sacrifice.

Bravery is a trait that all Veterans have. Many times Veterans are people that have left behind their mothers and fathers, husbands or wives, or children. The Veterans may have left their well-paying jobs to be in the military. They also may have left good opportunities. Veterans also stand up for our rights, liberty, justice, and freedom. Even though the Veterans may have not wanted to fight and serve all the time, they still do so. They are willing to fight for us and protect us. As a result, we Americans enjoy our freedom today because of their acts of bravery.

Sacrifice is what all Veterans give. The Veterans could possibly be killed or badly injured so that we can have freedom. They may only be paid an average wage, but they still get the job done. The Veterans fight for peace for us and we should appreciate it. Some people in the world do not have freedom and peace like you and I. In short, sacrifice is giving up something for the sake of others and not asking for anything in return.

Veterans care for our country and us. The Veterans are all very deserving and do all they can for us. They are very similar in many ways to Superman, Spiderman, or even Batman. They are our American heroes today and will be forever. This is the reason why Veterans of military services in the United States of America should be honored.
