Joshua Wallace, LNHA

Vice President of Growth Strategies

Joshua Wallace, LNHA, currently serves as vice president of growth strategies at Ohman Family Living. He received his B.S. in business administration at Colorado State University. He began his career in the corporate world, where he learned to launch new services in new markets via business acquisitions and corporate-backed growth strategies. He went on to work in the yachting industry for a number of years, where he gained insight into high-end hospitality. From there, he took on a position within a local church to lead missions' efforts locally and internationally, primarily responsible to advance outreach efforts through the establishment of external relationships.

At Ohman Family Living, he has served in administrative leadership positions overseeing operations, developing market strategies, and managing external business partnerships. He believes the emergence of a new business model, a fully optimized post-acute healthcare system, is the answer to the national healthcare crisis.
