

4 Questions to Select the Right Team Building Assessment

With different behavioral assessments to choose from, make sure to select the assessment that will make the greatest impact on your team. Here are the main features to consider in your search:

What are your goals?

Do you want a simple bonding event or are you trying to solve a team problem?

> Outline your goals to streamline your decisions and narrow your options.

Are the results trustworthy?

Does the assessment data come from a dependable source?

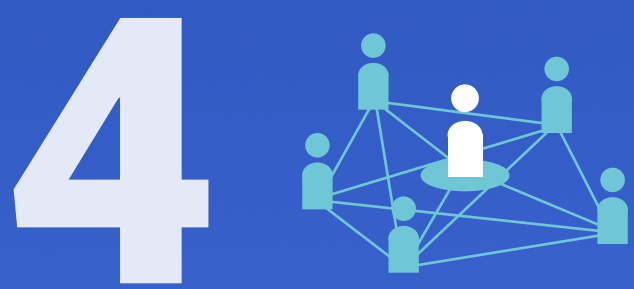

> Investigate the validity and scientific reliability of the assessment.

What is the cost to get started?

Think about your goals for the team building session—remember, the greater the investment, the greater the reward.

> Consider and articulate your goals to gain investment and support from a session facilitator and your organization.

How much support will you get?

Make sure to select an assessment company that is dedicated to empowering your team and helping them grow.

> Check to see if the assessment company provides sufficient support should you run into any roadblocks.