Leading With the Long View:

Developing Institutional Sustainability & Presidential Resilience

WHY ATTEND CWLI?

"The setting with a smaller group of engaged leaders created a space for more transparency and authenticity than I encounter at most conferences."

"It is one of the few places I go where I can share honestly about the challenges and successes of my work. I am encouraged and energized after leaving."

— CWLI PARTICIPANTS, 2017

IN 2013, FORBES DUBBED

a college presidency “the toughest leadership job of all.” How do you establish presidential habits for resilience, embedded within an institutional culture of sustainability? As the shape of higher education in our society continues to shift, the average tenure of presidents is decreasing. But the strength of an institution and its leadership are so closely tethered, there is no better time than this to examine strategies for creating sustainability and resilience in both. The fourth annual Credo Women in Leadership Institute will examine leadership with the long-term future in mind, with sessions led by your peer presidents and rich with conversation and discussion.
