

TOP 3 SIGNS THAT YOU'VE BEEN HACKED

What's worse than being hacked? How about having your sensitive data compromised – and having no idea? When your system is under attack by data thieves, there are a few warning signs that can help you to recognize that your data has been compromised so that you can start fighting back.

- 1. Unexpected new browser toolbars or software. This is a big red flag that you've been hacked. These unwanted additions to your system are often used by data thieves to gain greater access to your information.
- 2. Your password is different – and you didn't change it. This is a big red flag that you've been hacked. These unwanted additions to your system are often used by data thieves to gain greater access to your information.
- 3. Your computer or internet is noticeably slower. Long page load times can be more than just an annoyance. It could also be a sign that your machine is bogged down by malware.

If you suspect you've been hacked, you need to act quickly to minimize the damage (hint: we can help). Our expert team of security advisors, ahead of the latest data breach trends, ensures cyber risk protection for you and your business.

DING DONG, THE MONTHLY MONITOR IS DEAD!

So, like many of you, we've decided to drop a few in the New Year. But we are talking pages, not pounds.

We get that no one has time to actually read an entire newsletter. So we hope you enjoy our new, sleeker, slimmer offering, The Pendello Ping.

Goodbye, Monthly Monitor. You will be missed – by no one.

We've boiled it down to information you need and stuff you might want – such as cool gadgets and marketing offers.
