Spencer Cutting of PTC Recognized by CEdMA VP of PTC University recognized for Service

San Jose, CA – June 7, 2012 – The Computer Education Management Association (CEdMA), the premier networking organization for training executives, managers, and professionals in high tech companies, today announced that Spencer Cutting, VP of PTC University, was recently honored at CEdMA's Spring Conference. Cutting received the CEdMA Service Award, which recognizes outstanding service to CEdMA and its members.

Cutting has been an active CEdMA member for many years, and has served in nearly every role available to a non-board member, including conference presenter and panelist, a member of CEdMA's Executive Council, and as a frequent and enthusiastic contributor to several CEdMA Special Interest Groups. He is a skilled presenter and a creative and insightful education executive, who has always been willing to share his ideas and experience with other CEdMA members. "I'm honored to be recognized with this award," Cutting said. "My philosophy is that you get back what you put in, and that has certainly been my experience since joining CEdMA."

"Spencer Cutting is one of those rare individuals who is always willing to contribute his time to help others improve their business and personal skills," said Pat Durante, President of CEdMA. "Time and time again, Spencer's name comes up as someone who can really help us move CEdMA initiatives forward. This recognition is our way of saying thank you to Spencer for the wealth of experience and know-how he has bestowed on our organization over the years. CEdMA is a member-driven organization, and it's only through the efforts of members like Spencer, readily sharing their skills and experience, that CEdMA continues year after year to be the go-to organization for education managers at technology companies."
