Threat-Based Security Assessment

Security decisions should be made based on your data, your threats and your vulnerabilities.

SWC has developed a data-driven tool to assess your security posture by identifying the security controls that effect your sensitive data, ranking your current protection levels, and helping you map technology investments that matter most to your security environment.

What's your S.C.O.R.E.? What could it be?

S.C.O.R.E. reviews over 160 points of security control and provides a baseline rating of your current environment. SWC then identifies the highest impact technology investments to improve your security posture, providing a report of how your S.C.O.R.E. would improve with these investments.

Sensitive Data Identification

Review the data that is most enticing to attackers and that has the most potential to cause harm if compromised

Control Review

Assess your environment and identify status of 160 potential security controls

Organizational Readiness by Attack Methods

Classify the attack strategies your environment is vulnerable to and map back to controls in place

Risk Protection Grading

Provide a calculation of your current state of protection in your security controls

Evaluation and Recommendations

Map technology investments that will improve your controls and calculate a new potential S.C.O.R.E. for your organization

*Typical amount of controls for most organizations
