FROM THE PRINCIPAL . . .

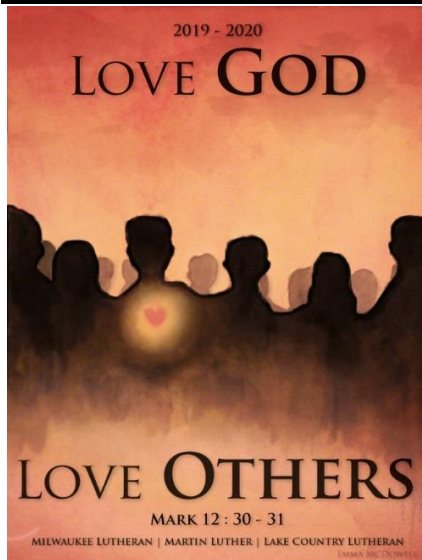

Love God with all your Mind by ... studying His Word

“The longest journey you will ever make is from your head to your heart.” I am pretty sure I have heard this statement in the past, but for some reason when I heard it earlier this fall it really stuck in my head. It is easy for there to be a disconnect between our head and our heart. Our head often refers to our intellect while our heart describes our emotion. Those two can sometimes conflict with each other. Yet, God in our theme verse clearly points out that our head – our thoughts, our intellect, our wisdom – are also to be connected in love to Him.

This is certainly a challenge for me in my personal faith walk, and sometimes in working with our students. Too often, I read Scripture more like a textbook – thinking that I can soak up the knowledge by reading the words. But my challenge is to truly study His Word – for it to go beyond an exercise in literature to a transformation message that reforms my heart. I need God’s Word to both convict my sinful heart but also to be a grace-filled reassurance of my Savior.

This requires a great deal of trust in the words of Scripture and is at the core of the tension between head and heart. Can our head convince us of the truth so we can believe with our hearts? This is not simply a new problem. The earliest Christians navigated the same question: They received the word with all eagerness, examining the Scriptures to see if these things were so. (Acts 17:11)

As we read God’s Word, His promise is to continue to speak to us in a way that moves us in our relationship with Him and that bridges the gap between our head and our heart. It is in that connection that we can Love God with all our Mind. May our study of Scripture be the tool that helps us develop that love toward God as He speaks to us through His Word.

LIVING STONES

“You yourselves like living stones are being built up as a spiritual house, to be a holy priesthood, to offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ.”

1 Peter 2:5

Stones, rocks, pebbles, boulders, and gravel are all stones of different sizes and shapes. We don't think of them as living, but rather just as stones. Stones we can pile up; stones we can skip across the water; stones that fill in potholes; stones that build; or stones that cause injury or even death in the right person's slingshot. I have a small collection of rocks which includes some fossils. Fossils are all classified as “living” stones. I have a chunk of coal—ferns, leaves, and grass; there is cochina—tiny marine creatures and their shells; there is Salurian limestone—mud, crinoids, and cockle shells; and the one on my desk is petrified wood—tree trunks turned to stone. Do you suppose that these are the kinds of stones St. Peter compares Christians to?

As we look around us here in Milwaukee, we see schools and churches that were built of steel, bricks, wood, mortar, and plaster, and stones. When the New Testament writers speak of the church, they are not referring to buildings, but rather, they are talking about people. The earliest known Christian church building was not even constructed until approximately 250 AD. In Peter's description of the church he describes people--Christians, as living stones “who are built up as a spiritual house”. From Peter's perspective the church is not a physical building, but rather an institution of people, whom God is developing and bringing together in Jesus. What's important for us as building stones is to envision that we fit together only because the Cornerstone is set first on a firm foundation and all other stones fit into place around it.

But wait, there's more! Not only are we the building blocks, we are also the priests in this spiritual house called the church. We offer continual sacrifices of prayer, praise, and thanksgiving. These are acceptable to God because of His great sacrifice; His Son Jesus Christ, the cornerstone upon who we build up the house of the Lord.

How we view ourselves as mere stones, greatly influences how we approach our ministry here at MLHS. Our goal is not to have a larger soccer field, or an auditorium, or a new theater building.(Those would be nice however.) Rather is it to develop people—specifically teenagers—into “living stones” that love and follow Jesus right along with us. Try to think of it like this for the new year, we're not a team; we're a pile of rocks—set firmly upon the foundation of faith in Jesus Christ, and by God's grace—called here to build up more stone walls as we build the Lord's house. May He give us the willingness and the key to reach and open every student's heart. Become the “stone” you are called to be!
