CHOOSE YOUR PACKAGE

What domain name should you choose?

Depending on your line of business, or if you're even a business at all, you'll choose the domain extension that relates to your entity. For example, a non-profit organisation will typically have a .org domain extension while a local South African fast-food chain will have a .co.za domain extension. For super-localised businesses wanting to give their brand an online presence, a city domain can help you get the right traffic to your website. City domains include all major SA cities.

Other domain extensions you can register:

.africa
.com
.net
.biz
.careers
.community and many more.

All you need to do is decide on the best name for your business and the right extension for your address.

ORDER AND INSTALLATION PROCESS

Getting started

Registering your domain name takes only a few minutes:

- Once you've decided on your domain name and extension, you'll need to register it with us.
- You can register a new domain name or might want to transfer an existing domain record to us.
- Provide all the necessary details of the new domain name to us via the online portal.
- We will ensure registration is completed without any hitches.
- We will inform you of your annual renewal dates.
- We will perform all your DNS management for you.

BUSINESS AND CONTRACT RULES

The fine print

A few useful Ts and Cs to keep in mind:

- Plans include a once-off annual payment or automated annual renewal.
- Clients may not transfer domains within 60 days of registration or previous transfer.
- Clients cannot transfer their domain if their registration fee is unpaid.
- If a client wants to transfer their domain to Ignite, they must arrange to transfer it with their existing supplier.
- The client's Internet service provider will also need to be notified if it's not the same company as the domain registration.
- Ignite takes no liability for the content used on a client's website.
