

Inspiro Communication Chat Group

A speech service for people who have had a stroke, run by a qualified Speech Pathologist

A variety of communication disorders can result from a stroke and they can affect a person's ability to speak, understand others, read and write.

The Inspiro Communication Chat Group is for people who have had a stroke and experience communication difficulties as result. The group will provide individuals the opportunity to work toward achieving communicative goals, practice and generalise their use of communication strategies and increase their confidence to communicate in a group setting.
