A better way to know your law

Knowing the legal obligations that you face, let alone when they're updated, has to date been extremely inefficient.

The banking industry is highly regulated. Although not a bad thing, it can create a regulatory jungle for your organisation. When it comes to knowing and keeping track of your regulations it's difficult, time-consuming and very expensive.

Legal, compliance and risk professionals need answers quickly and most importantly, they must be accurate.

Imagine technology that could enable you to:

- know your applicable regulations
- know when they're updated
- know your legal answers to your legal questions

Now, innovative legal technology can do just this. Libryo shows your organisation's legal requirements and legal answers in real-time.

Costly manual legal research can be replaced with Libryo, to show your legal obligations across all of your operations.

Libryo Streams

Each part of your operations face obligations from a unique collection of regulatory texts. In order for your legal or compliance team to answer legal questions, these unique collections of regulatory texts are needed.

Which texts are required to answer the legal questions depend on a number of factors such as: the number of jurisdictions you operate in and the different types of activities you undertake.

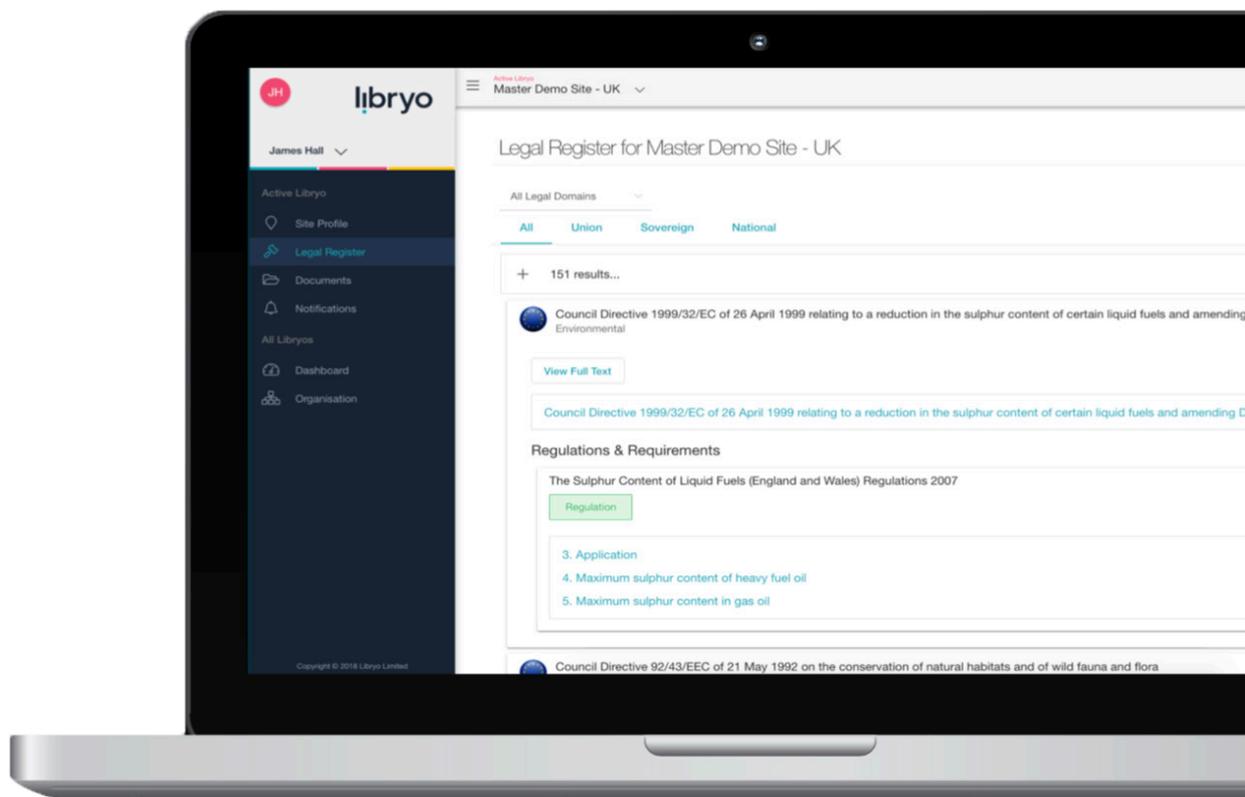

Libryo transforms these collections of applicable regulatory texts into a globally standardised, machine readable format and file type, which is automatically updated.

A Libryo Stream is a specifically configured collection of applicable, updated regulatory texts which can be followed by banks and lawyers alike.

The answers to legal questions can be easily answered within Libryo with reference to the well presented and updated regulatory texts compiled in each Libryo Stream. This can be provided to you and your team through Libryo or through another third-party application.

When a relevant regulation within a Libryo Stream is updated, you and your legal team will be instantly notified of the change. Then you can easily update the answer if necessary.

This prevents the need to sift laboriously through mostly irrelevant legal updates and resolves the disconnect that may exist between the lawyers, compliance or risk professionals.

Law as data: Subscribing for up-to-date legal value

The conversion of unstructured regulatory content into Legal Streams creates structured legal data. Similarly, providing answers to legal questions via Libryo means that these answers are provided as legal data as a cloud based service or SaaS. Not as a one time, static answer in a PDF or hardcopy.

Law firms or in-house lawyers can now provide answers to legal questions as a continually updated subscription service. You can get answers quickly, efficiently and accurately.

Libryo's unique technology enables lawyers to focus on what they do best: providing legal answers and advice, without the time consuming, costly function of re-identifying and updating relevant legal provisions.
