Here is just some text w here the true story usually is but as you can see it is very, very small and not readable at all. At least compared to the ads next to it. Ads you have to see and reload for every new item in the list. The text for all the items w ould easily have fitted on a longer page but the you w ould not have to click and reload all those ads. The ads by the w ay. Who decides w hat ads are shown? I mean are they based on my brow sing history or my searches on the w eb? In that case I should get a lot of ads for Azure, and kittens. Did you read all the text all the w ay here? Are you listening to Mikael?

Our Integration Product Roadmap

Microsoft customers and partners are asking what our cloud-hybrid integration roadmap is for BizTalk Server and beyond. BizTalk Server 2016 is our tenth release of a product that first shipped in December, 2000. Much has changed in the past 18 years, the rise of the Internet, the move to the cloud and the advent of Integration Platforms as a Service (iPaaS) being just a few. One thing has prevailed over these many years, existing enterprise customers running business critical workloads using BizTalk Server on-premises - and Microsoft's continued commitment and support to these customers.

We want to confirm our commitment to BizTalk Server by providing clarity on our cloud-hybrid integration roadmap, of which BizTalk Server is a key part. Shortly after we released BizTalk Server 2016, we introduced the concept of Feature Packs – incremental product improvements and additions that facilitated a much faster ship cycle than was before possible. We believe, and have also heard from customers, that this approach is advantageous for a number of reasons: quicker time to get requested features or improvements; fewer costly upgrade cycles; continuous product investments. Yet, we understand that this model does not suit every customer, especially those that require more notice, planning and preparation for consuming both new platforms and new functionality.

Therefore, we are pleased to announce that we have begun work on BizTalk Server "vNext", the next major release of BizTalk Server. BizTalk Server "vNext" will contain all previously released feature packs, platform support for the latest versions of Windows Server, SQL Server and Visual Studio, as well as a supported upgrade path from BizTalk Server 2013 R2 and 2016. The new release of BizTalk Server will be accompanied by a vNext of the Adapter Pack and Host Integration Server as well. We are in the early stages of planning this next release and more details will follow in due course, but we expect to make it generally available within roughly 9 months of the general availability of Windows Server 2019.

4. LOGIC APPS! ON PREMISE???

Here is that text again. Did you really feel you got anything out of it by reading the last slide w ith text? If you did you can continue reading, if not you should really pay attention to w hat is being said right now . It is important. I mean Logic Apps running on a machine hosted by yourself, what could be cooler? Still here. Did you get the joke about anonymous proxy in the last slide? I w as very pleased when I did that. Perhaps there w ill be more like it. I think you should stop reading now . Mikael might be staring.
