Career Summary

Edwin's working life is devoted to understanding the critical intersection between individuals and their work. This deep immersion in research and practice has centred on how the world of work is evolving in response to changes in society, technology and organisations.

His journey has seen him work in the UK and Canada and is a sought after facilitator and keynote speaker. He is a regular writer on career issues and has co-authored several articles and book chapters on careers, culture and leadership. Edwin has significant experience guiding leaders and organisations of all sizes through transformational change.
