Why are we different from the other screens? Why are we the only Roll Down screen to be approved for the HVHZ?

Our Atlas Armor® screen is made of a combination of Polyester and Aramid (sometimes known by its DuPont trademarked name Kevlar). Aramid is used in making bullet proof vests and high strength racing car bodies. The two materials make a very stable screen product with superior strength and durability. Our screens are slightly more expensive than polypropylene fabric (used in yellow ski tow ropes) and polyurethane fabric (trampolines) competitors. But, unlike our competitors, our screen can be used every day in full sun without fading, shrinking or cracking (not good characteristics for either a hurricane screen or any roll down screen). Our screens also don't rot or mildew and are not affected by airborne pollutants. In fact, our fabric screens are so tough we provide a 10 Year limited replacement warranty against all of the above problems.

Another value ... peace of mind.

More about our NOA testing
