Express Scripts Expands Use of KeyWatcher

A Fortune 100 company providing pharmacy benefit management services, Express Scripts handles millions of prescriptions each year via retail pharmacies and home delivery. The company is also a longtime user of KeyWatcher, having recently added more systems.

With KeyWatcher, the company gets a powerful way to manage keys to pharmaceutical storage areas, as well as staff and vendor access cards. The system provides a wealth of information available on demand, letting authorized users easily see which keys are in use, who took them out, and more. KeyWatcher can also automatically alert security when keys become overdue, helping to save time and provide some much-needed peace of mind for staff.

KeyWatcher Touch Comes to ITC Hotel

The ITC Katakiya is a massive, 5-star hotel located in the heart of Hyderabad, India. The hotel – which includes 180+ guest rooms, 7 dining establishments, multiple conference facilities, shops and more – is turning to KeyWatcher Touch to help secure and keep track of its many keys.

Fleet Key Control Shines at GFX

Morse had a great showing at this year’s Government Fleet Expo (GFX), which broke the previous attendance record. Visitors to the booth were especially pleased with some of KeyWatcher’s lesser known (and very useful) features for fleet management, like key scheduling and rotation (check out our website for more). The team did an admirable job of keeping up with all the inquiries—great work!

Key Register Systems Offer Embedded Learning for Improved Operational Efficiencies

Posted on July 22, 2016

The most recent run of physical security industry trade shows, both domestic and international, certainly impressed with the overwhelming number of advanced technology solutions that were displayed. One of the most interesting and exciting developments though is the expansion of product/technology training from classroom or web-based learning to include learning experiences through features that are embedded in the product. Studies indicate this type of learning can improve retention and help ensure product satisfaction.
