Exciting developments coming to ASIS

KeyWatcher Touch use expanding at UCSB

Long Bay Correctional turning to KeyWatcher

Monthly Newsletter August 2016 Edition

Excitement Building Ahead of ASIS

This year's ASIS is shaping up to be a great one. Demand for quality key control systems has never been stronger, and we expect to reach another milestone in attendance at this year's exhibition in Orlando. Better yet, we have some exciting developments that we'll be demoing.

Without giving too much away: we'll be showing strengthened integration capabilities along with hardware upgrades for KeyWatcher Touch, KeyBank Touch and more. Perhaps most exciting of all will be a sneak peek at an entirely new product that we've been working on for some time. Stop by the booth for a preview!

KeyWatcher Touch Expands at University of California

Already a user of KeyWatcher Touch, the University of California at Santa Barbara is expanding its use of the popular system. Popular in colleges and universities, the Touch ranges in use from protecting keys for classrooms to securing vehicle-fleet and residential-facility keys.

KeyWatcher to Protect Long Bay Correctional

KeyWatcher was recently chosen to help secure Australia's Long Bay Correctional Centre. Regardless of the facility setup, effective key management and tracking are a must to ensure the safety of both inmates and staff. Other tools, such as automatic logging of all key activity and on-demand activity reports, help strengthen security further while reducing paperwork.

Integrated Key Management Systems Integral to Situational Awareness at Large Venues

Posted on August 12, 2016

High security, high-risk events such as this summer's political conventions in the US require special planning that involves risk assessment, crowd management, staffing, communication, emergency response procedures and so on. To maintain the highest levels of on-site security, among other measures, guard services are equipped with mobile technology for faster evaluations and response; K-9 units patrol the grounds sniffing for bombs; and integrated security and surveillance operations are controlled from a centralized platform for better situational awareness.
