

Reprints Desk Recognized as “One of the Companies that Matter Most” in the Digital Content Industry

Leading Provider of SaaS Platform for Scientific Research Joins EContent Magazine’s List of Influential Global Technology Companies

ENCINO, Calif., November 14, 2017 — Research Solutions, Inc., (OTCQB: RSSS), a pioneer of cloud-based solutions for scientific research, today announced that its wholly-owned subsidiary Reprints Desk has been named to EContent Magazine’s list of 100 digital content industry leaders for the seventh consecutive year in the Distribution and Delivery category. Recognized for its award-winning research retrieval and intelligence platform Article Galaxy, Reprints Desk enables researchers and scientists to get on-demand access to scientific documents from any discovery website. The company has recently introduced an upgraded version of its SaaS platform featuring responsive mobile design, the ability to get instant stats on trending research papers, and on-demand data intelligence augmenting scientific content.

Honoring both established and early-stage companies, EContent Magazine’s annual list is decided by a panel of eleven information industry experts who choose the 100 most influential organizations from thousands of candidates in the rapidly changing digital content creation and delivery industry. Notable companies in EContent Magazine’s 2017-2018 list included Apple, Facebook, Google, and IBM among others.

“Every year during the voting process, we see how the changing list reflects the way the larger industry is developing,” said Theresa Cramer, editor at EContent Magazine. “In 2017, a couple of trends emerged. The first is the importance of artificial intelligence (AI), which is probably obvious to anyone in the content business. The second is the increasing importance of digital asset management (DAM).”

“We are honored to again be included in EContent Magazine’s list of companies who are making the biggest impact on digital content creation and delivery technologies,” said Mitja Alexander Linss, Reprints Desk’s Director of Marketing. “This continued recognition reflects Reprints Desk’s commitment to developing the most advanced and useful technologies to help scientific researchers discover, manage and use the information they need.”

Corporations, academic institutions, and government organizations around the world rely on Reprints Desk and its online platform Article Galaxy for legal access to full-text scientific, technical, and medical content when subscription access does not yet exist. Article Galaxy provides one-stop shopping and lowest cost acquisition of full-text journal articles from publishers without requiring the use of credit cards for each transaction. Reprints Desk has ranked #1 overall and in each category in a document delivery vendor survey of buyers conducted by industry analyst and advisory firm Outsell since the company’s inception.
