10 THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW ABOUT TARASCON

1. The Tarascon Series is named after the Tarascon castle in France where the original author was visiting when he decided to turn his “cheat sheet” of drug information into a published book.
2. Every year we include a trivia question in the Classic and Deluxe books. The first 25 people who find it and respond with the correct answer get a prize.
3. You can now find Tarascon Pharmacopoeia drug information in EvidenceCare's unique online decision support tool for providers. Check them out at www.evidence.care.
4. Our editor-in-chief, Richard Hamilton, was the Centrifuge Medical Officer for the NASTAR Center (www.nastarcenter.com) during the training of a number of astronauts as well as the Virgin Galactic Founders.
5. Tarascon was acquired by Jones and Bartlett Publishers in 2008. The editorial and marketing staff is skeptical that people will actually read this. If you've gotten this far and want a free book, send an email to info@tarascon.com with the subject line grapefruit.
6. The same image has been featured on the print versions of the Pharmacopoeia for the past 31 years (The Apothecary, by Jost Amman, Frankfurt, 1574), although each year we choose a new color.
7. You can find Tarascon books all over the world! Various Pocketbooks have been translated into Spanish, Indonesian, Simplified Chinese, Greek, Romanian, and Turkish.
8. There are over 3,000 drugs and over 1,200 drug interactions in the mobile version of the Pharmacopoeia.
9. The mobile edition started out as a reference tool for PDAs. Now we have mobile apps that are updated weekly and separate apps based on several of our Pocketbooks.
10. The Tarascon editorial team believes in giving back! We are proud to have donated money and/or books to Doctors Without Borders, hospitals, and clinics in Africa, Asia, Europe, and North America.
