Explosion of data volumes

Spatial technology and satellites are used by various industrial and governmental sectors. They allow for the transmission of data (images and video) in very high quality and with great precision.

Experts in several domains use these technologies to meet their different business needs: food and agriculture control, territorial conflicts, humanitarian crises, earth sciences (weather, natural disasters, seismology) and military defense.

The quality and accuracy of the transmitted data has a significant impact on storage requirements and long-term archiving.

Nodeum responds to this explosive demand for large-scale storage and archival with a highly innovative solution that has been recommended by experts and analysts alike.
