

Amor Ministries works diligently to keep the safety of its Impact Trip participants at the forefront of all decisions when serving across the border and abroad. Accordingly, Amor uses U.S. Department of State Travel Warnings to inform groups of Amor's current evaluation of such areas.

In the recently released Travel Warning (January 19, 2016), the US. Department of State provided a state by state assessment of risks while traveling in Mexico.

While the area of Northern Baja California was addressed in this Travel Warning, it was not an area in which U.S. citizens were encouraged to delay travel. The current Travel Warning did advise U.S. citizens to exercise caution while in Northern Baja. Amor continues to be extremely cautious in the areas where Amor Impact Trip groups camp, work, and travel.

In addition, while the state of Sonora was addressed in the Travel Warning, the city of Puerto Peñasco is considered to be an area to exercise caution. Thousands of tourists visit Puerto Peñasco annually, with the vast majority driving from Arizona. The border that was recommended for use in the Travel Warning (Lukeville, AZ/ Sonoyta, Sonora) is the one that Amor advises as well.

Amor is continuing to suspend most travel to Ciudad Juarez. We continue to monitor the situation through our staff and Ministry Planning Board in the region and will provide updates as conditions change. Please contact Amor for more information on travel to Ciudad Juarez or the House Sponsorship program.

Amor is continually monitoring the region and the U.S. Consulate for changes in safety. Because of this, Amor will continue to serve in the cities of Puerto Peñasco, Tijuana, Rosarito, Tecate, and Ciudad Juarez. For more information about regional updates, visit <http://travel.state.gov/content/passports/english/alertswarnings/mexico-travel-warning.html>

In view of that, Amor will continue to require groups serving in the region to travel in caravans, remain at Amor's carefully monitored camp sites in the evening, and keep movement limited to daylight hours. In addition, Amor will continue to carefully select pre-designated work areas which have been identified as having typical urban environments.

Finally, equipped with updated information from Amor's contacts in the U.S. Consulate, the Mexican mayoral staff and police officials who serve the communities that Amor supports, the Ministry feels confident we are able to make the best decision for our participants, the Pastors, and the Mexican families we serve. Come.Build.Hope.
