

U.S. Department of Labor Occupational Safety and Health Administration Emergency Preparedness and Response

OSHA has now developed and is providing Emergency Preparedness and Response information that is available at the www.osha.gov website. The program addresses emergencies and the hazards that can be created for workers in the emergency-impacted area as well as workers responding to those emergencies.

The following components are addressed:

- General Preparedness and Response
- Natural Disasters and Weather
- Emergency Events—Hurricane Page
- Oil; Chemical, Biological, Radiological, Nuclear and Explosive (CBRNE) Incidents
- Disease Agents and Toxins
- Resources and Guides

Under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, employers are responsible for providing safe and healthful workplaces for their employees. OSHA's role is to help ensure these conditions for America's working men and women by setting and enforcing standards, and providing training, education and assistance.
