Information to help you identify training requirements

For many organizations it is a constant struggle to identify what training needs to be done, when to do it, how often it must be done, and what it must encompass. With that thought in mind, ORCIG has identified three resources that are available online to you; free of charge. The links below will bring you to guidance documents that can be easily navigated and help you clearly see what training requirements are needed for your team and your team's exposures.

Please review the information provided and be sure to reach out to your Safety Specialist if you have specific questions regarding training. You may also reach out to your Safety Specialist if you need help with training and want to schedule training for your team, also free of charge.
