

DIGITAL PLUG'N'PLAY LEARNING

Anti-Corruption

Introduction

Powerful anti-corruption learning game

It has been some dark years for anti-corruption. Denmark has lost its leading position as the least corruptive country in the world, and the media coverage determines that there are big challenges in companies all over Europe.

There are many grey areas when it comes to receiving gifts and making favors in the business world and public institutions. Both employees and managers risk because lack of knowledge to make mistakes that can cost the company a public scandal and a tainted reputation.

Learningbank's new learning game Anti-corruption is developed together with Coop Denmark and their lawyers. But now every company can benefit from the anti-corruption game, which is flexible in regard to design and content, so it can be adapted to all companies and businesses.

Why

- So the employees can gain experiences through typical everyday dilemmas – without the consequences if they fail.
- To create a foundation of awareness about grey areas and to give the employee a wake-up call.
- Because the interactive learning game is engaging and a motivating way to train.
- To ensure that the training is accessible and fits into a busy workday.
- To document learning.

ABOUT THE GAME

Digital learning game that combines theory and practice

The combination of game mechanics, engaging storytelling, and high professional learning content ensures that your employees gain basic awareness and get a wake-up call, so they in the future will think twice when they face everyday dilemmas.

Forget everything about an all-day course with legal terms and heavy reading materials. With 15 minutes' digital learning your employees get an insight in bribery, embezzlement, facilitating payment, nepotism, and conflicts of interest through visual scenarios that relate to an ordinary workday.

Built by experts

The game is built by psychologists, lawyers, graphical designers, and user experience experts who understand your employees and through that can present them with a learning content that is both visually striking, involving, and with high professional ballast.

Practical information

- The game can be adapted to the customer's visual universe.
- The game can be delivered in every language.
- The game can be delivered as a SCORM file and can be implemented in every SCORM compatible learning platform.
