

DIGITAL LEARNING GAME

Communication training for managers

learningbank

INTRODUCTION

Bring the communication skills to the next level

Learningbank is now launching a digital learning game as an add-on to your DISC training for managers. The DISC-Management-game gives managers an engaging and involving way of training.

Previously, there haven't been the best opportunities to train DISC after a finished course or in the actual training phase. But we are breaking this now to "switch on" what the manager has learned after receiving his or her DISC Management report.

Your managers can dig even deeper than assessment and report - in order to prepare themselves for using the tool in the workday. Just like the manager can return later on and practice the material without using extra resources on e.g. external consultants.

Why

- To "switch on" what the manager learns after having received his or her DISC Management report.
- To dig even deeper than assessment and report before using the new management tools in the workday.
- Because the interactive learning game is the most engaging and motivating way to train DISC before you involve other people.
- Because managers can "go back" and train without having to use a lot of resources on external consultants.

ABOUT THE GAME

Digital learning game that combines theory and practice

The learning universe alternates between a recognizable office environment and superhero-colleagues with different DISC styles. On the different floors of the office, the manager is being involved and gets concrete tasks that need to be solved based on his or her knowledge of DISC. The focus is on tasks and dilemmas from concrete management disciplines for example delegation, collaboration with others, motivation, and employee development. But there is also room for exploring one's own hypotheses and feel one's way – always with adapted and elaborated feedback.

Developed by experts

Learningbank's learning designers, psychologists, user experience experts, and graphical designers have in close collaboration with the market-leading experts from DISCnordic and Carlsberg developed the DISC Management game for Carlsberg's management training.

Coming soon

We are creating new learning games that introduce DISC styles and build understanding for our differences as people. Both employees and managers get the opportunity to experience different scenarios and to gain experiences. A great way to train communication skills for EVERYONE.
