Transforming Your Human Capital Strategy to Achieve Equity and Excellence

Attracting, retaining, and developing teachers, principals, and central office leaders has never been more challenging. With teachers leaving the profession at greater rates than ever before, a scarcity of qualified candidates for hard-to-fill positions, and the difficulty of recruiting diverse candidates, it's clear that district leaders must dramatically rethink their approach if they want to achieve equity and excellence for all students. The good news is that a strategic approach to human capital management can make a big difference.

At this year's Leadership Development Meetings, we'll explore the role human capital strategy plays in responding to the myriad challenges facing public school districts and delve into the need to transform HR from an administrative center to a strategic agent of change. We will introduce a framework that leaders can utilize to effectively recruit and train teachers to meet the changing needs of today's schools and uncover strategies to identify and develop high potential individuals for leadership positions.

Learn from DMGroup Experts

Expanding HR's role beyond transactional services such as record keeping and benefits administration to build a human capital function that is a strategic asset is both an essential priority and a daunting challenge.

DMGroup experts, including Nathan Levenson, Adam Anderson, Mark Wiernusz, and Sam Ribnick, will take a deep dive into how you can assess your current human capital approach and detail steps you can immediately take to reinvigorate your recruiting, hiring, training, and leadership development activities.

Together we'll examine:

- Why and, more importantly, how to align your human capital strategy with overall district objectives
- New approaches that enable you to not only recruit diverse candidates but also create the supportive environment necessary to retain them
- Ways to systematize high potential identification and development to build a strong bench of capable leaders for tomorrow

Why Attendees Consider this a Can't-Miss Event

We annually bring teams to these meetings and it has led to some high-quality innovation in our district.

Dr. Ehren Jarrett, Rockford School District #205 (IL)

Some of the best staff development and professional development that I'm involved with.

J. Alvin Wilbanks, Gwinnett County Public Schools (GA)

It's very eye-opening for us to come as a team to think about the foundational programs that hold up our school system and how we can work smarter and do more.

Dr. Patricia Cosentino, New Fairfield Public Schools (CT)

We have had several key strategic projects in the district grow out of the learning that took place at the Leadership Development Meetings.

Howard Thiery, Regional School District 17 (CT)

Join these and other forward-thinking district and building leaders from all over the country at DMGroup's 2019 Leadership Development Meetings.
