I'm passionate about technology and business, so in 2004 I started OSIbeyond, a technology consulting firm providing managed IT services, cloud solutions, and strategic technology consulting. Our mission has always been to provide clients a world-class experience, with the fundamental principle that technical competence and high end customer service are not mutually exclusive. I'm continuously in pursuit of perfection with the firm belief that we can always do things better. There is nothing more challenging to me than when I hear, "it cannot be done".

In 2008 we decided to focus our efforts exclusively on the nonprofit and association industry, once realizing that these organizations were often under served and lacking technology leadership. Over the years, we have gained extensive knowledge about the nonprofit and association world, which is quite different than the commercial sector. Our in-depth understanding of the operations of these organizations, has allowed us to focus our expertise on advancing technology for nonprofits and associations.

Looking ahead to the future, we are relentlessly developing new cutting edge solutions to continue the progression of technology in the nonprofit and association sector. While I have gained extensive experience over the years, there is still a lot to be learned, and I'm always hungry for more!
