

GDPR compliance survey

Two thirds 67% say they don't yet have a plan to ensure GDPR is fully implemented by the enforcement date of 25 May 2018.

Almost one in ten (9%) saying they were not aware of the new regulation.

Confusion about the differences between the existing Data Protection Act and the new requirements under GDPR...

Three in 10 (30%) saying they understand the differences very well.

Of the rest, around a third (31%) said they have a little understanding of the differences.

With four out of 10 (39%) saying they don't understand the differences well or at all well.

Almost half (49%)

store client data in locked cupboards or drawers within their offices.

17% storing them unlocked in their offices.

The rest store material in locked out-buildings or secure third-party run facilities.

Nine out of 10 (89%)

currently store data that relates to clients they used to advise but no longer have a need to contact or have lost contact with for a number of years.

Of those who store

previous client data, 43% regard this data as being a valuable asset to their business.

Around one in five say they don't store paper based material containing personal client data at all.

22%

