

THE LACY LEDGER

Construction news and trends, plus a little light-heartedness

The Lacy Team. Pictured from left to right is...well, let's just say everybody except Tim Rush; somebody had to take the photo.

Hearing Conservation Day

Just a little off the top, please!

On July 10th, Lacy Construction held its annual hearing tests. We discovered that some of our workers may have been experiencing impaired hearing from the hair covering their ears. With a revelation such as this, Lacy immediately called upon a previous client, the Xenon International School of Hair Design. We asked some of the students (and their instructor) to come to our facility to perform a little hair removal; this was, of course, at no charge to our employees. Other offerings included a mini hand massage and salt treatment; we now have the softest construction hands in the business.

Lacy Construction finished the day by taking our team photo and enjoying a BBQ with hamburgers and side dishes purchased from another of our clients, Skagway grocery stores and catering. Impeccable hearing, clean haircuts, soft hands and well fed employees...what else could we ask for?

Project superintendent Marty Evans and project manager Chris Wissing take advantage of a free haircut.

Evangelical Free Church

More classrooms, please!

The congregation of Evangelical Free Church has outgrown its current facilities. With the need for more classroom space, a decision was made to add on to the church, as well as remodel some existing space.

The 29,000-square-foot addition (18,000-square-foot first floor, 11,000-square-foot second floor) is all learning space. The first floor has been designated as elementary classrooms, while the second floor will serve the senior high education needs. An additional 6,000 square feet of existing space is being remodeled to accommodate the adult classrooms.

Construction details of the addition include a pre-engineered metal building with brick exterior, interior block walls and a Flexcore flooring system to support the second floor. Other amenities include an elevator and operable walls for flexible classroom size.

As with any education, it comes with a price. In this case, Evangelical Free Church is investing $2.2 million to upgrade its campus to facilitate the education of its congregation. The project began March 1st and is on schedule to finish in January, which means you can look forward to completion photos in our next issue of The Lacy Ledger.

In progress and on schedule.
