Self Regulation Strategies For The Classroom

It is important to teach students how they can self regulate within the context of their learning environment. These strategies will help students monitor and control their behavior, emotions, and thoughts, while staying grounded in the classroom.

1. Provide a basket of various fidgets that students can use any time they need help focusing. Ensure there are fidgets for all kinds of tactile experiences.
2. Encourage students to set personal goals that are both challenging and attainable.
3. Select rewards with students so they can practice self-reinforcement techniques.

Classroom Decorative

Utilizing Visual Teaching Aids

Visual teaching aids help students remember concepts, provide a touchpoint to refer back to in the future, and help make the classroom a vibrant, dynamic place.

1. Keep things flexible: If no one is using an important anchor chart, move it to a more prominent position in the room.
2. Mix it up: Once your visuals have been on the wall for a few months, students will notice them less. Keep visual aids fresh and new.
3. Refer back to your visual aids daily: When a student asks how many sides a pentagon has, refer them to the aids.
4. Have students create their own visual aids: These can go on the wall or on their desks, whatever works best for their learning styles.
5. Set learning goals using timelines: Put these goals up on the wall so that each milestone can be marked and celebrated as a team.

How To Adapt Lessons For Visual Learners

1. Let visual learners illustrate what they are learning.
2. Give students a picture or body action as well as verbal direction.
3. Show students the whole idea, rather than introducing pieces one at a time.
4. Give students opportunities to use their hands and bodies to explore ideas. Hands-on is key.
5. Use a class set of white-boards to teach new concepts
6. Encourage visual learners to take notes with different coloured pens or markers. Give each colour a specific role.
7. Use colour in your own handouts or notes to differentiate between concepts or ideas.
8. Always provide written instructions.
9. Use games in the classroom that reinforce learning outcomes.

The Skills

1 Learning the letter sounds

Children are taught the 42 main letter sounds (not just the alphabet). Later they learn the alternative spellings of some sounds. For example, the ai sound can be ay (as in hay).

2 Learning letter formation

Many letters end with a joining tail for easier transfer to joined-up (cursive) writing.

3 Blending

Children are taught how to blend the sounds together to read new words.

4 Identifying the sounds in words

Listening for the sounds in words gives children the best start for writing.

5 Tricky Words

These words have irregular spellings. Only part of the word may be tricky, for instance the "ai" as in said.

How To Prepare For Inquiry-based Science In The Classroom

Teaching science using an inquiry-based approach helps student engage with science in a way that is hands-on, experiential, and self-directed, which leaves them with a deeper understanding of the material. Here are some quick tips on how to get started in your classroom:

1. Provide background information that sparks questions from students.
2. Agree upon a central question to frame learning.
3. Connect the unit to something students are familiar with, like a local environmental concern or an event in their community.
4. Include hands-on learning opportunities as much as possible.
5. Refer back to the scientific method every day.
6. Let students explore, test, and make mistakes!
